ELECTRICAL MACHINERY AND APPARATUS

Customs returns show imports under this heading to have totaled ₱5,830,861 in 1936, an increase of 35 percent over the ₱4,307,336 in 1935. The increase seems to have been pretty well distributed among the several items of electrical machinery and appliances, and the proportion from the United States is not believed to have fallen below the 86 percent achieved in 1935. Imports of some of the principal items were as follows:

	1935		1936
	U.S.A.	Total	U.S.A.	Total
Incandescent bulbs and tubes	199,322	P 371,774	P 289,955	P 497,237
Electrical machinery and motors	675,169	753,662	798,804	939,297
Batteries	241,837	243,815	254,047	257,509
Electric refrigerators	201,406	201,469	419,731	420,505
Insulated wire	428,152	481,479	550,732	654,066

Imports of incandescent bulbs increased about 33 percent and imports from the United States increased a little more than that, the American proportion of the total being 58 percent in 1936 and 53 percent in 1935. Most of the balance came from Germany, the Osram lamp being well represented in the Philippines. The Phillips lamp also seems fairly popular but imports from the Netherlands were surprisingly small, according to records in the Bureau of Customs, amounting to only four percent of the total. There were no changes in prices during the year, American, German and Dutch lamps all selling at about the same price. Imports of cheap Japanese lamps continued to decline, amounting to ten percent of the total in 1936 against 15 percent in 1935 and about 20 percent in 1934.

Imports of electrical machinery and motors increased about 25 percent but imports from the United States increased only 18 percent due to increased competition from Sweden. The American proportion of the total was only 85 percent, against 90 percent in 1935. Swedish electrical machinery is very ably represented and has been sold at a price 10 to 15 percent under the American price, but Swedish manufacturers were unable to promise prompt delivery at the end of the year, being booked to capacity for several months ahead, and prices increased.

Imports of batteries, not including flashlight batteries, increased only slightly, in spite of the increase in the use of automobiles and in installations of electrical equipment. The United States continued to get practically all of the business.

Imports of electric refrigerators increased more than 100 percent, with sales increasing in about the same proportion, due mainly to stock market profits and improve revenue from agricultural products. Demand for electric refrigerators was good at the end of the year and prospects for 1937 appear encouraging.

Imports of insulated wires increased about 35 percent, the American share being about 89 percent of the total in 1936, compared with 85 percent the previous year. The chief competition came from Canada, imports of cheap insulated wires from Japan amounting to only about three percent of the total.

Sales of radio receiving sets apparently improved, new registrations totaling 5,745 sets in 1936, compared with 4,504 sets in 1935. Cancellations totaled 1,283 in 1936, against 1,202 in 1935. Sales might perhaps have been greater had it not been for the uncertainty of radio broadcasting. An act passed by the National Assembly provided for a Radio Advisory Board to censor radio programs and to study the possibility of nationalizing radio broadcasting. Meanwhile, the three privately-owned broadcasting companies, KZRM, KZEG, and KZIB, are continuing to broadcast regular programs consisting of local talent, news items, stock market quotations, electric transcriptions and phonograph records. The volume of radio advertising appeared to be somewhat increased in 1936.

Electric power production increased in 1936, the principal company producing 128,039,606 KWH in 1936, against 114,179,000 KWH in 1935, an increase of 12 percent. It did not add substantially to its transmission or generating facilities during the year. Smaller plants operating throughout the Islands and for the most part using diesel power are estimated to have produced in the neighborhood of 12,000,000 KWH in 1936, or probably a slight increase over 1935. The National Assembly passed an Act appropriating P250,000 for organization expenses and capital of a National Power Corporation, which is authorized to make surveys of power sites in the Philippines and to borrow up to P20,000,000 for the purpose of developing and operating hydro-electric power plants. Preliminary surveys have indicated that considerable amounts of power could be developed at sites in Lanao, Tayabas and Central Luzon, but so far no study has been given to the problem of marketing.

Prospects appear good for 1937. Mines should continue to be large buyers of electrical machinery and equipment and construction activities should offer a good market for wiring fixtures, etc. The formation of a number of new mining and brokerage companies and the installation of ticker systems greatly increased the demand for telephone apparatus in 1936 and it is expected to continue in 1937. The market for flashlights, flashlight batteries and incandescent bulbs should be very good in 1937, if present prices for Philippine products continue.

PETROLEUM PRODUCTS

Imports of petroleum products, according to the Bureau of Customs, were valued at P14,425,493 in 1936, or about three percent less than in 1935. Imports of gasoline, of which about 98 percent comes from the United States, totaled only 145,078,000 liters in the whole of 1936, compared with 158,731,000 liters in 1935, an eight percent decrease. Imports of kerosene, imported entirely from the United States, totaled 78,304,000 liters in 1936, against 87,440,000 liters in 1935, a ten percent decrease, though value increased two percent, apparently due to higher invoice valuation. Imports of lubricating oil totaled 11,669,000 liters, 85 percent American, compared with 11,221,000 liters, 83 percent American, in 1935. Crude oil imports totaled 341,299,000 liters, 39 percent American, in 1936, against 358,084,000 liters, 42 percent American, in 1935.

Customs returns represent liquidation of entries rather than actual imports and these figures do not appear to include exceptionally heavy imports of gasoline and lubricating oil, in December, 1936, in anticipation of an increase in the tax on those products. Actually, imports of all classes of petroleum products appear to have been substantially higher in 1936 than in 1935, gasoline imports totaling 42,913,000 gallons, according to an examination of manifests, against 40,576,494 gallons in 1935; kerosene imports 20,778,000 gallons against 20,623,000; lubricating oil 3,489,000 gallons against 3,457,000; diesel oil 29,942,000 gallons against 26,094,000; fuel oil 54,102,000 gallons against 49,821,000. Imports will probably not decrease in 1937, though stocks of gasoline and lubricating oil were rather large at the beginning of the year.

Sales of gasoline are estimated at 41,000,000 gallons in 1936, an 18 percent increase over 1935. Sales of alcohol for motive power purposes totaled 51,563,000 proof liters in the first eleven months of 1936, an eight percent increase over the 1935 figure. The retail price of gasoline was reduced by two centavos a liter in March. It was increased by one centavo in November, anticipating an increase in the gasoline tax from four centavos a liter to five centavos, effective January 1, 1937. The tax increase is not expected to affect sales of gasoline, since production of alcohol, a competing product, is limited by the limitation on sugar. Alcohol production will probably increase 10 to 15 percent in 1937, due to the larger sugar crop, but sales of gasoline may also be expected to increase, unless a reduction in business should combine with the increase in gasoline and oil taxes and in registration fees to discourage bus and truck operators.

A bill introduced in the National Assembly, which would have required an admixture of 25 percent alcohol in all gasoline sold, was not favorably considered, legislators realizing that there is not enough alcohol produced in the country to meet such a requirement.

Kerosene sales are estimated at 22,500,000 gallons for 1936, an 18 percent increase over 1935. The increase was much greater than had been expected, the trend of kerosene sales being generally downward, due to the gradual spread of electricity. Electric power production increased substantially in 1936 in the Manila district, but there was no expansion in the provinces and the improved purchasing power encouraged larger sales of kerosene in areas not served by the electric power companies. It seems probable that sales will be at least as good in 1937.

Sales of bunker fuel oil are estimated at 213,000 long tons, compared with 221,945 long tons in 1935. The decrease is due to lower purchases by the Navy. Omitting Navy purchases, sales are estimated at 165,000 long tons in 1936, a 17 percent increase over 1935 sales.

Sales of diesel oil increased from 85,794 long tons in 1935 to 94,500 long tons in 1936. Omitting Navy purchases, sales totaled 90,000 long tons in 1936, an increase of about 13 percent over 1935 sales. The increase was mainly in sales to the mines. Sales for marine use were somewhat better than in 1935, while sales to electric light and power companies were about the same.

Lubricating oil sales are estimated at 3,650,000 gallons in 1936, an increase of about 14 percent. A slightly better average grade of oil was imported in 1936, due to the large purchases by the mines, which generally require oil of good quality, and to the fact that independent importers, while offering about as much competition as in 1935, brought in a greater proportion of standard brands of oil. Sales of grease are estimated at 1,750,000 pounds, a 14 percent increase over 1935. The demand for lubricating oil and grease should be at least equally good in 1937. Lubricating oil prices were generally increased one centavo a liter at the end of the year, due to the increase in the tax from three centavos a liter to four centavos.

PAPER AND MANUFACTURES

Imports of unprinted paper increased about eight percent in 1936, wrapping paper and a variety of other types of paper being imported in greater volume and value. The total value of unprinted paper imports in 1936 was ₱4,531,659. Imports of printing paper, the largest single item, were apparently greater in volume in 1936 than in 1935, but were about eight percent lower in value, amounting only to ₱1,381,286, against ₱1,502,172 in 1935. Imports of printing paper from the United States were valued at ₱133,000 less than in 1935 and made up about 60 percent of total imports, against 66 percent in 1935. The lower value of printing paper imports in 1936 is due to the very low prices which ruled throughout most of the year. Prices on Canadian and European newsprint increased nearly 30 percent in the last two months of the year, however. American prices increased about 15 percent and were competitive with European prices at the end of the year. Not a great deal of business was being placed, however, possibly due to the shortage of ships and to the fact that American mills, busy on domestic orders, were unable to promise early deliveries. Stocks were fairly large at the end of the year but will probably be reduced in the first half of 1937. Imports in 1937 are expected to be lower in volume but as great or greater in value.

Imports of wrapping paper increased about 23 percent in value in 1936, amounting to ₱855,515 against ₱692,863 in 1935. The United States was again the leading source of supply with 73 percent of the total in 1936. Imports of wrapping paper should increase in 1937, with a greater volume of trade expected.

Imports of paper bags increased about 15 percent in 1936, in spite of the fact that a local company started making paper bags during the year. Imports are expected to be somewhat reduced in 1937 and will be made up mainly of cement bags. The increase in 1936 was entirely in imports of cement bags, from Japan. The American share in 1936 was about 75 percent of total bag imports.

Imports of writing paper fell off in 1936, amounting to ₱101,200, or about ten percent less than in 1935. Imports from the United States fell off about 16 percent and made up 80 percent of the total in 1936, against nearly 90 percent in 1935. Competition was from Germany and China.

Imports of printed matter were reduced about 20 percent in 1936, amounting to ₱1,910,988. The decline was due principally to lower imports of textbooks, which were imported to the value of only ₱726,841 in 1936, against ₱1,309,103 in 1935. The 1936 figure is a normal one, imports having been unusually large in 1935 due to the purchase by the Government of text books to the value of ₱700,000 for rental to students in the more advanced grades and high schools. An Act passed by the National Assembly appropriates ₱570,000 for the purchase of necessary equipment for the use of the Bureau of Printing to use in printing elementary textbooks. The Act also provides that textbooks for use in the elementary grades of public schools must be printed either by the Bureau of Printing or by private printers in the Philippines from manuscripts and materials which shall be furnished and prepared by the Bureau of Education. There will doubtless be some delay in putting this law into effect, as it will take some time to purchase and install the necessary presses and other equipment and probably even more time to prepare the textbooks, but it appears probable that it will ultimately result in a reduction in imports of American textbooks.

CHEMICAL PRODUCTS

Fertilizers.—Imports of fertilizers increased moderately, amounting to ₱4,271,720, or 18 percent better than the 1935 figure. Imports increased from both Germany and the United States, with the former showing a more marked improvement. The United States supplied 61 percent of the 1936 total against 64 percent in 1935. With sugar production more or less fixed, fertilizer imports will probably continue at about the same rate. The American share has been exceptionally good in the past two years as a result of a campaign of sugar centrals and the Federation of Sugar Planters to increase purchases of American supplies in return for the advantage given by the United States to Philippine sugar. With German prices consistently about five percent lower than American prices, however, the German share of the total is likely to gain at the expense of the American. Imports from Japan have been small and appear unlikely to increase.

Chemicals, Drugs, Dyes and Medicines.—Imports under this heading were about six percent greater than in 1935 due largely to mining activity. A further moderate increase may be expected in 1937. The American share continues in the neighborhood of 70 percent, with competition chiefly in chemicals from Canada, Germany and Japan.

Paints, Pigments and Varnishes.—Imports amounted to ₱1,778,860 in 1936, a 35 percent increase over 1935, in spite of the increase in domestic manufacture. Imports apparently came about 75 percent from the United States, the balance being mainly zinc oxide from Great Britain and cheap paints from China and Japan. Building activity is expected to continue to increase, offering a good market for paints in 1937.

Perfumery, Cosmetics and Toilet Preparations.—These were imported to the value of P1,499,133 in 1936, a 14 percent increase over the same period of 1935. Imports were apparently about 80 percent from the United States, the balance being made up mainly of perfumes from France and Spain.

Three companies have been organized to manufacture perfumes, lotions and scented soap in the Philippines, from French essences, and they are all expecting to start production in 1937. It is believed that this domestic competition will affect imports from France and Spain rather than from the United States.

TOBACCO AND PRODUCTS

Customs figures indicate total value of cigarette imports in 1936 at only P5,342,460, a 13 percent decrease from the P6,153,235 in 1935. Customs figures are based on liquidation of entries rather than on actual arrival of goods and appear in this instance to be misleading. Excise tax returns indicate that sales of imported cigarettes increased about 25 percent over 1935 and the principal importers believe that imports increased in about the same proportion. The preference for American cigarettes has been growing steadily in recent years, 1935 sales having shown a 16.97 percent increase over the previous year. Sales of domestic cigarettes, on the hand, have declined or at best held even. Some local companies started during the year to manufacture American-type cigarettes from tobacco imported from the United States, but the preference continues for the brands widely advertised in American and local magazines and papers.

Imports of other tobacco products amounted to P1,788,400 in 1936, a 25 percent increase over the P1,347,324 imported in 1935. The increase was chiefly in chewing and smoking tobacco.

LEATHER

Business was fair in the first eight months of 1936, with no particular features. Prices were unusually steady. In the last four months of the year, business was excellent with the demand increasing more than seasonally. Rising prices in the United States, particularly on the lower grades of upper leather, the grades chiefly demanded in the Philippines, were reflected in rapidly rising prices in the local market during the last four months of the year. These price increases were accepted by the factories and by the hand-shoemakers of Marikina, who are responsible for more than half the shoe production of the Islands, and the market became definitely a seller's market toward the end of the year, when stocks were reduced and replacement became difficult.

Moderate imports of low grades bellies and shoulders from Australia continued, entirely for the use of the Marikina shoemakers. Occasional imports of black upper leather from Japan, though small, caused some disquiet in the market during the first three quarters of the year, due to the low prices at which this leather was sold. It does not appear to have been very satisfactory, due mainly to the fact that it will not take a high polish. Imports from the United States constituted well over 90 percent of total leather imports in 1936.

It appears probable that demand will continue good and prices firm during the first quarter of 1937. The usual quiet season may then be expected to ensue, with a likelihood of somewhat easier prices if the shipping strike has been settled by that time.

Production of leather in the Philippines, by two fairly modern tanneries and a number of small tanners doing only local business, was apparently about the same as the previous year, despite Army contracts. The principal trouble of the two domestic tanneries is in getting a regular supply of suitable hides, not too badly cut, from the slaughterhouses. There was, nevertheless, a moderate exportation of carabao hides to Japan and other Asiatic markets in 1936.

Imports of leather and leather products in 1936 totaled ₱2,518,656 in value, according to the Bureau of Customs, an 18 percent increase over last year. This is chiefly upper and sole leather and cut soles for the use of shoemakers, although a few ready-made shoes and other leather products are imported. The increase is due mainly to greater volume, although average price was a little better, particularly in the last half of the year.

Factory production of shoes increased markedly in 1936, particularly in the last half of the year which some factories consider the best six months period for several years. The increasing cost of leather necessitated a general increase of 10 to 20 percent in shoe prices on January 1, 1937, but with most native products bringing good prices and with a feeling of optimism throughout the Islands, the price increase is not expected to meet with great resistance from buyers. The volume of orders at the beginning of January indicates, in fact, that the coming year will be an exceptionally good one.

TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNICATIONS

Railways.—Railroad carloadings did not show the expected improvement in 1936, in spite of a considerably heavier sugar crop. Freight carloadings on the Manila Railroad Company totaled only 1,267,180 tons in the 52 weeks ended December 26, 1936, a very slight decline from the 1,278,306 tons loaded in the same period of 1935. There was only a moderate increase in the amount of sugar carried and sugar cane actually showed a decrease, due presumably to the increasing tendency to use trucks. Rice and palay movement was reduced due to the short crop and there was also a considerable reduction in copra and coconuts. Lumber and timber movement was also substantially reduced, in spite of the considerable increase in production and exports. This appears to be due to a greater tendency to ship by water. Movement of mineral products, manufactured goods and L.C.L. shipments was considerably better in 1936 than in 1935.

No figures are available to show the movement of freight on the Philippine Railway Company, but it would appear from preliminary financial returns that there was no improvement over 1935.

Railroad carloadings are not a particularly good index of freight movement, as the railroads serve relatively limited areas, by far the greater part being served by boats and trucks.

Prospects for 1937 appear fairly good. Movement of most commodities may be expected to be a little better than in 1936 and the increase in the tax on gasoline and lubricating oil and in motor vehicle registration fees may improve the competitive position of the railways by forcing an increase in truck transportation rates.

The railroads built no considerable extensions during the year and purchases were confined to essential replacements. The Manila Railroad is authorized by an Act passed by the National Assembly to abandon some little-used lines in Southern Luzon and extend its Southern line to Legaspi, which should improve the earnings of its Southern lines. The Assembly appropriated ₱300,000 for the purchase of Manila Railroad Company stock, the proceeds to be used toward this extension.

Another Act passed by the National Assembly authorizes the Manila Railroad Company to construct and operate toll bridges, toll viaducts and toll tunnels.

The fate of the Philippine Railway Company remains in doubt. Bonds totaling about ₱17,000,000 become due in 1937 and no provision has been made for meeting them. The Philippine Government has been paying interest on the bonds but does not guarantee repayment of the principal and shows no present inclination to purchase the bonds and operate the lines. There seems little prospect that the railway will ever be a paying proposition but some compromise may be worked out whereby it will be permitted to continue in operation.

Shipping.—Export cargoes totaled 2,692,095 tons in 1936, according to the Associated Steamship Lines. This compares with 1,917,398 tons in 1935. The increase is due mainly to sugar, but there was also a substantial increase in most other export products, notably logs and lumber, coconut products and minerals. Of the 1936 exports, 872,728 tons went to Oriental ports, 431,028 tons to the American Pacific Coast, 1,107,827 tons to the Atlantic Coast and 252,383 tons to Europe. American boats carried 545,653 tons, or 20 percent of the total, compared with 28 percent in 1935.

Import tonnage was apparently much better than in 1935 and interisland traffic was very good.

Passenger traffic was excellent throughout the year and hotel facilities in Manila were strained at all times, excepting during the rainy season. An exceptionally heavy ingress of visitors is expected in the first quarter of 1937, due to the Eucharistic Congress and difficulty is anticipated in accommodating them. The Manila Hotel is building an annex with 68 air-conditioned bedrooms and a banquet room, which should be ready by about the end of the first quarter.

German and Italian steamship lines offered a very popular rapid service to Europe during the year, which provided some competition to American and Canadian lines operating on the Pacific Ocean.

Prospects for shipping in 1937 are difficult to forecast due to the exceptional situation at the end of the year, arising from the tie-up of American ships. A sudden increase in the demand for tonnage all over the world is believed an even more important factor in producing an extreme shortage of space available to Philippine shippers at the end of the year. It became definitely a buyers' market, with ship operators finding no difficulty in filling all the ships they could get hold of and following a natural tendency to prefer the classes of cargo carrying the best rates. Shipments of mineral ores to the United States have been suspended for that reason and sugar shippers are experiencing difficulty in getting adequate space. Assuming the settlement of complicating factors, it appears probable that cargo movements from the Philippines in 1937 will show a fairly good increase over 1936.

Motor Transportation.—Although no figures are available, bus and truck transportation companies appear to have had a successful year in 1936. Transportation companies have been active purchasers of trucks throughout most of the year. Increased difficulties are anticipated for 1937, when registration fees are increased nearly 50 percent and there is an increase as of January 1, 1937, from four to five centavos a liter in the tax on gasoline and from three to four centavos a liter in the tax on lubricating oil. Some of the weaker operators may find it impossible to pay the increased taxes, but it is believed that the larger companies will continue to operate at a profit.

Aviation.—Regular airmail service between San Francisco and Manila was provided during 1936. Beginning with October 27, passengers were also carried. This method of traveling has proved very popular, particularly since the shipping strike reduced the number of boats available, and the Clippers have for the most part been filled close to capacity.

It remains to be seen whether trans-Pacific air travel will prove as popular when the novelty has worn off and when adequate accommodation is available on ships, but it will always be a great convenience to business men to whom time is of paramount importance. The company established a temporary base at Cavite early in the year and is planning a permanent base in Manila Harbor.

The Philippine Aerial Taxi Company continued to operate on a schedule of seven trips a week between Manila and Baguio and increased its schedule to Paracale from one plane a week to five. Several extra flights were required to accommodate passengers. The company again operated without accident.

The Iloilo-Negros Air Express Company continued its semi-weekly service between Manila and Davao until the end of May when it had its first accident, a tri-motored plane being forced to land in the water near Panay. It was impossible to recover the plane and the mystery why all three motors stopped at almost the same time was not solved. There were no serious injuries to passengers or crew. The Manila-Davao and Manila-Iloilo services were suspended early in September but will be resumed about the end of February, 1937, with a new 16-passenger amphibian plane of American make.

Due to the suspension of the Manila-Iloilo and Manila-Davao services, the number of passengers carried on scheduled flights was somewhat reduced, amounting to 17,548, compared with 19,075 in 1935. The number of hours flown and miles covered on scheduled flights, nevertheless, increased to 4,243.45 and 189,481, respectively, in 1936, compared with 2,969 and 344,686 in 1935. In addition, there were 1,295 passengers carried, 180,219 miles covered and 2,014 hours flown on non-scheduled flights. The two operating companies carried 3,860 kilos of mail, compared with 2,431 kilos in 1935.

The number of privately-owned planes in operation in the Philippines at the end of 1936 was 19. There were 20 licensed commercial pilots, 25 licensed pilots and 73 licensed student pilots.

A bill passed by the National Assembly authorizes the Director of Posts to enter into contracts for the transportation of mail by air between points within the Philippines and between the Philippines and foreign countries. The base rate may not exceed 75 centavos per airplane mile for transporting a mail load not exceeding 200 pounds. Another bill provides for the creation of a Bureau of Civil Aviation, under the Department of Public Works and Communications. Another requires airplane transportation companies to install two-way radios for all scheduled flights and for all flights lasting over one hour.

The 1937 Public Works Bill contains an appropriation of ₱300,000 for the development of a national airport. There is a plan under consideration to fill in ground for a landing field in the neighborhood of Fort San Antonio Abad in Manila Harbor, with a seaplane basin adjacent to it. Pan American Airways would be prepared to construct their own base in connection with the project. There seems to be some difficulty in connection with the plan, however, and no decision has yet been made. A sum of ₱200,000 available from the 1936 Public Works Appropriation might have been available for an airport but had not been released by the end of the year and was, therefore, automatically turned back to the General Fund.

EXCHANGE

Opening the year with sellers at 200.50 and buyers at 200, the market for dollars was easy during the first quarter due to sugar shipments and to the shortage of cash in Manila. This cash situation was alleviated in April and dollars were firm during the second quarter, falling off a little toward the end of June due to demand for pesos for mid-year cash requirements. A steady market was expected during the last half of the year, as most of the sugar had been sold by mid-year. Renewed weakness developed in August, however, and continued throughout the balance of the year. At the end of the year, sellers of T.T. were satisfied with 198.75 and buyers were offering no better than 198.25, the treasury's buying price. The dollar reached its high point in May when sellers were asking 201 and buyers offering 200.50 but the average of both selling and buying quotations for the year was below par.

The relative weakness in the dollar during the last half of 1936, a period in which sugar exports were moderate, was apparently due mainly to the fact that banks were amply supplied with dollars as a result of the very remunerative export trade in sugar and other Philippine products in the first half of the year and did not wish to increase their balances in the United States, where they could obtain only very low interest rates. Exports of products other than sugar, including gold bullion, continued excellent and increasing throughout the last half of the year and the favorable balance of trade for the year reached record proportions. The supply of dollars apparently exceeded demand at all times during the last half of the year, in spite of the fact that imports were also good during most of the period. Toward the end of the year, however, imports fell off due to the shipping strike and the weakness in exchange rates was accentuated.

Another factor was the heavy increase in bank deposits, Philippine law requiring that foreign banks normally keep in the Philippines assets equal to 90 percent of their total deposits. The retention in the Philippines of fairly large remittances that would normally have been made to Spain and other countries and the rather considerable imports of capital, chiefly from Hong Kong and China, for investment in Philippine mining shares, were also factors in the strength of the peso.

With a large supply of dollars becoming available from sugar shipments during the next few months, it appears almost certain that the buying quotation for dollars will remain considerably below par and probably not much above the treasury's buying point of 198.25.

BANKING AND CREDIT

The consolidated statement of Manila banks as of December 26, 1936, showed an increase for the year of ₱75,000,000 in total resources. Investments increased ₱17,000,000, but the increase was apparently due mainly to contracts for foreign exchange. Cash declined moderately in the first quarter of the year, during the sugar milling season, and increased substantially in the second quarter, as returns from exports were received. There was little change during the balance of the year, until December, when there was an increase of about ₱3,000,000, due partly to cashing of war veterans bonus bonds. The net cash increase for the year was about ₱12,000,000. Loans and discounts increased from ₱39,000,000 at the beginning of the year to ₱51,000,000 at the end of the first quarter, the sugar harvesting season. They remained in the neighborhood of ₱52,000,000 during the balance of the year, increasing to ₱54,500,000 with the start of the new sugar season in December, a net gain of ₱15,000,000 for the year. Overdrafts were steady at ₱55,000,000 during the first quarter and declined to ₱48,000,000 at mid-year proceeds of sugar sales apparently being reflected in reduced overdrafts rather than loans and discounts. Overdrafts increased steadily during the last half of the year due to stock market activities, reaching a high of ₱68,000,000 in November and declining slightly in December. The net increase for the year was ₱11,000,000.

The most striking increase was in demand deposits, which went from P55,000,000 at the beginning of the year and P52,000,000 at the end of January to P104,000,000 at the end of October, falling off slightly during the balance of the year for a net gain of P47,000,000. The increase in demand deposits during the first half-year appears to have been due partly to proceeds of sugar sales and during the last half-year, largely to the spectacular increase in mining share quotations. General prosperity was a factor, however, throughout the year. The net working capital of foreign banks fell from P10,000,000 at the beginning of the year to a minus quantity of P4,000,000 at mid-year, when credit balances from sugar sales had been built up at head offices, but increased in the last quarter to P12,000,000 as funds were required for the new sugar season.

Consolidated figures for Manila banks as of December 28, 1935, and December 26, 1936, are as follows:

	Thousands of Pesos
	Dec. 28 1935	Dec. 26 1936
Total resources	251,959	325,786
Investments	59,950	77,483
Cash on hand	24,721	36,580
Loans and discounts	39,265	54,511
Overdrafts	55,029	66,117
Demand deposits	55,181	102,015
Savings deposits	40,420	35,614
Time deposits	46,811	58,226
Net amount due from banks, agencies and branches in the Philippines	8,773	17,149
Net amount due from other (foreign) banks	29,051	33,910
Net amount due from Philippine branches to for- eign banks	10,349	11,960
Average weekly debits to individual accounts ...	23,712	39,628
Total net circulation	117,274	138,990
Total Government reserves	154,826	176,544

Debits to individual accounts were consistently ahead of 1935 and during some months, when stock market activity was at its height, were considerably more than double the figure for the corresponding month of the previous year. The weekly average for the year was about P39,600,000 in 1936, against P23,700,000 in 1935. The weekly average was a little under P30,000,000 for the first half-year, but increased suddenly between early July and the end of October, falling off during the last two months of the year. The weekly average for the last six months was P46,500,000. The very striking increase was due mainly to stock market activity, but partly to general prosperity.

Bank clearings, available for domestic banks only, ran about 25 percent ahead of the previous year during the first half of 1936 but were considerably more than double the previous year's figures for the last half, the total for the year amounting to P377,000,000 or 77 percent more than in 1935. Branches of foreign banks, which do the largest part of the banking business in the Philippines, are not members of the Clearing House Association.

Circulation increased from P117,274,000 at the beginning of the year to P124,500,000 at the end of March, due largely to sugar benefit payments in March. The figure remained in the neighborhood of P125,000,000 during the second and third quarters and increased to ₱138,990,000 at the end of the year, a seasonal increase accentuated by the cashing of war veterans bonus bonds and by the general prosperity. The net increase in circulation for the year was nearly ₱22,000,000, which followed an increase of ₱15,000,000 in 1935.

There was no general decrease in interest rates on deposits or loans, despite the continued excess of cash and the comparative lack of demand for loans and overdrafts. Demand deposits were not particularly welcomed, since banks have to pay a three-quarter percent tax on deposits, and no interest was paid on demand deposits. There was some switch from savings to time deposits during the year as a result of the lower interest rate on the former. Interest rates on loans remained at seven to nine percent on domestic loans and five to six percent on letter-of-credit and trust receipt loans, with export bills discounted at one-quarter percent per month.

Despite the shortage of revenue producing assets, most of the banks appear to have operated at a profit in 1936. The Philippine National Bank made a profit of ₱2,700,000, of which about ₱2,000,000 represented profits from operations, the balance being payment of principal and interest on debts which had been written off. The profits from operations was about ₱100,000 better than the previous year. Loans to sugar centrals, which were written off several years ago but which have since proved to be good, were written up to their face value, increasing the bank's assets by about ₱6,685,000. That amount was turned over to the Government along with ₱2,023.00, representing three-fourths of the year's profit, and approximately ₱1,250,000 in taxes on income, capital deposits and circulation.

Judge Corpus resigned as President of the Bank early in the year and was replaced by Vicente Carmona, formerly Under-Secretary of Finance. The Board of Directors, appointed at the same time, is made up entirely of Government representatives, neither American nor Filipino business men being included. President Quezon, in his message to the Directors, pointed out that the Bank should play an important part in the execution of plans designed to build up the national economy in preparation for independence. This would involve aid in the promotion and financing of new enterprises and advice to clients contemplating new ventures. A careful study should, he indicated, be made of the feasibility of improving credit facilities to small merchants and farmers and thus improving social conditions and alleviating the evils of usury. The Directors should, in short, consider loans and investments from the broader viewpoint of social and economic advantage, as well as from the strictly banking viewpoint, but without departing from sound banking practices.

The Philippine National Bank opened a new department during the year for the purchase and sale of Philippine Government bonds, hoping to create a market for those bonds in the Philippines. The new department did a moderate business which might have been greater had it not been for the diversion afforded by the exceptional activity in the stock market.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANK

There were 650 first-class postal savings bank offices and 345 second-class offices in operation at the end of 1936, an increase of eight first-class offices and one second-class office during the year. Plans are being made at the end of the year to have a post office and a postal savings bank in every municipality in the Islands, or a total of 1,003. There were 35,838 new accounts opened in 1936 and 21,314 accounts closed, increasing the total number of outstanding accounts to 325,451. Deposits totaled ₱11,806,891, or an average of ₱35.19 per depositor at the end of 1936, against ₱10,619,340, an average of ₱32.09 at the end of 1935. This increase in deposits is considered a very good showing, particularly in view of the fact that there were several withdrawals of deposits, apparently for stock market speculation.

The income of the bank is given as ₱428,970 for 1936 and expenditures at ₱552,514, an apparent loss of ₱23,544 from operation. Expenditures include accrued interest credited to savings accounts in the amount of ₱329,627, while income does not include accrued interest receivable, which is estimated conservatively at ₱290,000. It is believed therefore that the final figures will show a net profit of at least ₱166,455, increasing the net surplus of the Postal Savings Bank to ₱1,659,981.

GOVERNMENT COMPANIES

The Government investment in railways again proved unprofitable. The Manila Railroad Company, entirely government-owned, will apparently show a net loss in the neighborhood of ₱1,500,000, against ₱1,840,000 in 1935. The moderate improvement is due mainly to reduced interest charges, as a result of retirement of ₱16,340,000 of bonds carrying interest charges of over 6-1/2 percent, including exchange, through ₱13,500,000 of loans, bearing a low interest rate, from the Government and the Philippine National Bank. Railway operating revenues did not increase, despite increased sugar movement and efforts to meet motor competition by decreasing rates. A better showing is hoped for in 1937. It is possible that the increase in gasoline tax and motor vehicle registration fees may improve the competitive position of the railways.

The Philippine Railway Company was again unable to meet bond interest charges and the government, which guarantees interest on the bonds, had to contribute about ₱500,000 on that account. The bonds, due July 1, 1937, and totaling about ₱17,000,000, are not guaranteed as to principal and no indication has been given as to what action will be taken on them.

The Philippine National Bank showed a net profit, after taxes, of ₱2,697,000, of which about ₱2,000,000 was operating profit, the balance recoveries from debts written off. In 1935, the net profit was ₱3,966,000, but about half of that was recoveries from debts written off. The reason for the lower amount of recoveries in 1936 was the fact that the balance outstanding of loans to sugar centrals, which were written off some years ago, was reinstated at full face value, the amount of the write-up being paid to the Government. Hidden assets of the Bank still include shares of sugar centrals carried at ₱53,000 and worth nearly ₱4,000,000 at present values, and a few debts carried at ₱1.00, from which some recoveries may be made. In the main, however, the Bank will have to rely on operating revenue in the future and may be expected to show somewhat smaller profits for that reason. The Bank paid a total of about ₱9,950,000 to the Government in 1936, including ₱6,685,000 from the write-up of sugar central loans, ₱2,023,000 representing 75 percent of the net profit for the year and about ₱1,250,000 in taxes on income, capital, deposits and circulation.

The Cebu Portland Cement Company showed a profit of ₱450,000 for the first ten months of 1936, compared with ₱345,000 in the same period of 1935. The Manila Hotel had an excellent year and made a profit of ₱200,000, the best in its history. With its facilities considerably increased by an annex, which will be ready by March or April, 1937, it should show an increased profit in the coming year. The National Rice and Corn Corporation is estimated to have made a profit of better than 100 percent from its sale of imported rice. This is not available for dividends, but will be added to the company's capital and used to further its aim of stabilizing rice prices.

Several new Government companies or other organizations were formed during the year. Commonwealth Act No. 2, passed by the National Assembly at its first session, provided for a National Economic Council, evidencing a consciousness of the necessity for an organized study of the industrial needs and possibilities of the country, in preparation for ul-timinate independence. The National Development Company was reorganized as a public company and it is anticipated that its capital will be increased from time to time by Government purchases of its stock, as the desirability of expansion becomes evident and money becomes available. Its capital was thus increased by P1,000,000 during the year, the company adding another million pesos from its own surplus to form a subsidiary under the name of the National Rice and Corn Corporation. Plans call for further expansion from time to time to finance the organization of additional subsidiaries to take the lead in the development of new industries, such as cotton yarn and cloth manufacture, preservation of foodstuffs, iron and steel manufactures, etc.

A National Power Corporation was organized at the end of the year, with a capital of P250,000 appropriated by the National Assembly, to be used for expenses of organization. The company has the right to borrow up to P20,000,000 to finance the development and operation of hydro-electric power plants. Favorable preliminary reports have been made as to the possibility of developing water power sites in Tayabas, Lanao and Central Luzon, but so far less attention has apparently been given to the problems of marketing or using the power that may be produced.

Organization of a National Iron Company has been recommended by a committee appointed to study the subject. Attention to hydro-electric power and iron production is considered important from the standpoint of national defense, as well as economic preparation for independence.

Other Government organizations formed during the year include a National Produce Exchange, to facilitate trading in agricultural products; a Radio Advisory Board, to censor radio programs and study ways and means for the nationalization of radio broadcasting; a Government Service Insurance System, to replace pension funds; a National Loan and Investment Board, to centralize management of various funds. The Philippine National Bank and the National Development Company were authorized to build and maintain warehouses for storage of tobacco and copra, the Bureau of Printing was given an appropriation of P570,000 to enable it to print elementary textbooks and the National Development Company was given an appropriation of P500,000 to stabilize the price of buntal fiber.

GOVERNMENT FINANCES

The Commonwealth Government started off under favorable financial auspices, its revenues in its first full year of existence showing a marked increase as a result of exceptionally prosperous business conditions. General Fund revenues totaled about P76,678,000 for the year (December estimated), compared with P65,000,000 in 1935. The 1936 figure includes repayment by the Philippine National Bank of old advances in the amount of P4,679,000 made possible by writing up assets previously written off and now clearly good, but does not include transfers of P7,579,000 from the Special and Bond Funds (specifically, from the Exchange Standard Fund.) These accretions to the General Fund are reflected in large part in the item of P9,990,000, among the expenditures, representing a loan to the Manila Railroad Company to permit it to retire bonds. In 1935, repayments by the Philippine National Bank and transfers from the Special and Bond Funds were at the more nearly normal figures of P2,051,000 and P1,616,000.

Expenditures totaled about P71,000,000 in 1936, compared with P60,375,000 in 1935. The 1936 figure, however, includes P15,148,000 for investments and outlays, of which P9,990,000 was a loan to the Manila Railroad Company (mentioned above); P300,000 an investment in Manila Railroad Company stock to permit it to close up a gap in its Southern lines; P1,000,- 000 an investment in National Development Company stock for use in financing the National Rice and Corn Corporation; and ₱1,017,000 used for the purchase of government office buildings. Of the 1935 expenditures, only ₱3,360,000 represented investments and outlays.

On the basis of these preliminary figures, it appears that ordinary (recurrent) revenue was sufficient to balance total expenditures in 1936, including over ₱12,000,000 for investments. Adding nonrecurrent revenues and transfers, there is a margin of around ₱12,044,000. The principal items of revenues and expenditures in 1935 and 1936 are as follows (December estimated for 1936):

	Revenues (in ₱1,000)
	1	9	3	5	1	9	3	6
Import duties	19,393				22,226
Excise taxes	12,017				13,427
License and business taxes	14,001				17,240
Income tax	4,727				4,472
Net from taxes (after ₱3,164,00 contribution to local governments)				49,689			57,237
Incidental revenue				4,455			5,590
Earnings and Credits				10,874			8,966
				65,018			71,793
Repayment of loans and advances				2,128			4,885
Transfers from Special and Bond Funds				1,616			7,579
Total				68,762			84,257

Incidental revenue is mainly from public forests and from United States internal revenue on cigars and liquors. Earnings and Credits is made up in 1936 entirely of earnings of Government companies and functional activities of government, both of which show moderate increases over 1935. The 1935 figure also includes about ₱2,000,000 of prior year credits.

	Expenditures (in ₱1,000)
	1935	1936
Administrative	30,967	29,593
Contribution to local Governments	12,662	11,994
Pensions and gratuities	1,717	1,715
Outlays and investments	3,360	15,148
Public debt	8,499	8,257
Public works	2,991	4,290
Other charges	179	50
Total	60,375	71,047
Transferred to Special Fund	5,725	1,166

The 1936 increase in outlays and investments has already been explained. The increase in public works expenditures is largely in roads and bridges, for which ₱1,975,000 was spent from the General Fund in 1936, against ₱902,000 in 1935. Of the public Debt allotment in 1936, ₱2,402,000 went to the sinking fund, against ₱2,515,000 in 1935.

Encouraged by increasing revenues, the National Assembly, in its 1936 session, passed appropriation bills totaling about ₱78,000,000. Part of these provided for the funds to become available immediately, increasing the expenditures authorized for 1936, including fixed expenditures, to ₱73,928,000, part of which will be actually spent in 1937. Expenditures authorized for 1937 total ₱74,620,000, plus conditional appropriations of ₱6,260,000 (from the General Fund) for public works and ₱2,000,000 for a Waterworks Revolving Fund. Revenues are expected to reach at least ₱80,000,000, as new taxes and increased rates are expected to bring in ₱7,312,000, while increased efficiency in collection of present taxes is promised as a result of personnel increases in the Bureaus of Customs and Internal Revenue. This should permit most of the conditional public works appropriations to be released. The money for the water works fund may come from a bond issue.

The accumulated net surplus in the General Fund at the beginning of 1936 was ₱39,565,496. An estimated ₱12,045,511 excess of income over expenditures in 1936, including transfers to and from other Funds, increased the surplus to ₱51,611,007 at the end of 1936. Of that amount, ₱21,672,000 was encumbered, leaving an unencumbered surplus of ₱29,939,066 at the end of 1936. Encumbrances include appropriations made in previous years which did not revert to the General Fund, and appropriations in acts passed by the National Assembly in 1936 to become available immediately upon signature by the President. Not included, however, are special appropriations for 1937, passed by the National Assembly in its 1936 session. These amounted to ₱14,820,000 which, by accounting practice, became encumbrances immediately after December 31, automatically reducing the unencumbered surplus to ₱15,119,456. Actually, of course, the special appropriations for 1937 are expected to be covered from current revenues.

The Special Fund, made up of various revolving and continuing funds, amounted to ₱32,364,000 at the beginning of 1936. Income during the year totaled ₱19,051,000, or ₱2,967,000 more than in 1935. Expenditures, including transfers, totaled ₱17,121,000, or an increase of ₱464,000 over 1935. The balance at the end of the year was, therefore, ₱34,295,000.

Provincial and municipal revenues are understood to have shown a gratifying increase over 1935, but complete figures are not available. The Collector of Internal Revenue reports collections of ₱13,652,268 for provincial governments, compared with ₱10,041,174 in 1935, an increase of 35.96 percent. Internal Revenue collections for municipal governments are reported at ₱3,888,781, a 7.19 percent increase over 1935, while collections for the City of Manila totaled ₱549,273, a 2.19 percent decrease.

PUBLIC WORKS ACTIVITIES

Public Works activities include the following:

Roads and Bridges.—A total of ₱15,550,000 was made available for road and bridge construction between November 15, 1935, and December 31, 1936. This made possible the construction of 375 kilometers of first class roads, 579 kilometers of second-class roads and 640 kilometers of third-class roads. A part of it was used for the maintenance of 9,544 kilometers of first-class roads, 5,402 kilometers of second-class roads, and 2,409 kilometers of third-class roads. There were 25 permanent bridges with an aggregate span of 2,629 meters completed during the period at a total cost of ₱1,773,000, chiefly from the Revolving Bridge Fund. The bridges were chiefly made with reinforced concrete spans or steel truss spans. The new bridges were nearly completed in Manila. One, the Ayala bridge, has one through riveted steel span 242 feet long and one steel span 200 feet long, with 30 feet roadway. The other, the Santa Ana bridge has one 240-foot through riveted steel span and one 12-meter concrete girder approach span.

Particular attention was given to road construction in Mindanao, where ₱990,000 was made available for road work in Lanao, Cotabato and Davao. A second-class road from Iligan on the north coast of Mindanao, passing through Cotabato and going west along the south coast to Davao, with a total length of 412 kilometers, was practically completed by the end of the year. It is expected that emphasis on road construction in Mindanao will continue during 1937.

Buildings.—There were 46 permanent buildings completed during the year at a total cost of ₱725,000. These were principally markets and schools. In addition, 128 barracks for the Army were constructed at a cost of about ₱2,000,000.

Port Works.—Work was done at 90 ports in the Philippines during 1936 and approximately ₱2,200,000 spent on construction maintenance and improvement. The wharf at Legaspi has been completed to a length of 194 meters and the harbor is being dredged to a depth of 30 feet. A modern reinforced concrete wharf with steel frame cargo shed was completed at Iloilo.

Dredging was continued in Manila Harbor.

Waterworks.—Work was completed on seven projects serving a population of 22,200, at a total cost of ₱227,612. Work was newly started on 13 projects serving a population of 31,630, at an estimated cost of ₱415,000. There were at the end of the year 45 projects under construction estimated to cost ₱3,840,000 and to serve a population of 232,730.

A bill passed by the National Assembly during the year provides for an appropriation of ₱2,000,000, either from the General Fund or from the sale of bonds, to constitute a Revolving Fund for the construction of provincial and municipal waterworks systems.

The Zamboanga sewerage system was completed at a total cost of ₱186,512 and plans were completed for construction of the Iloilo sewerage system, which will be financed with the proceeds of a ₱350,000 bond issue. Plans are being made for a storm drain system costing around ₱110,000 at Silay, Occidental Negros.

The Public Works Act for 1937 appropriates ₱1,500,000 for river and sea protection projects, of which ₱550,000 is for two river control projects in Pampanga and Pangasinan, in Central Luzon. Floods from those two rivers have caused serious damage in the past two rainy seasons.

Artesian Wells.—Between November 15, 1935, and December 31, 1936, 71 successful wells were drilled capable of supplying 2,111 gallons per minute of potable water to a population of 105,588. Their cost was ₱99,000. The number of drilling machines was increased from 10 to 17 due to the necessity of providing sources of water supply for army training camps.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION

Real estate sales reported in Manila totaled ₱18,557,530, the largest since 1919. The 1936 figure does not include three important transactions consummated during the year, including the sale of the National City Bank Building for over ₱2,000,000 and reported to involve altogether over ₱5,000,000. If they had been recorded the total would have been over ₱23,000,000, or far ahead of any previous year.

Prices improved considerably, though they are still below predepression prices. Modern office buildings were filled to capacity by the unusual number of new companies formed, and rents were increased. The acute shortage of modern residential buildings continued. Some indication of the improvement in real estate in the past two years may be seen in the fact that the largest building and loan association, El Hogar Filipino, which had a deficit at the end of 1934, was able to declare a dividend on September 30, 1936.

New building permits totaled ₱6,140,330 for the year, or more than double the ₱2,773,950 for 1935. One large new office building was erected but for the most part the new building was residential, including an addition to the Manila Hotel, a smaller hotel and some apartment houses. There is still an acute shortage of better class residence and office space, particularly the former, and since real estate and building construction offer a convenient form of investment for idle funds, it is probable that real estate and construction activities will continue at the same or an increased rate in 1937.

INVESTMENTS

There were 460 companies incorporated in the Philippines in 1936, with ₱172,622,000 of authorized capital, of which ₱52,017,000 was subscribed and ₱18,989,000 paid up in cash and ₱3,092,000 in property. The controlling interest in 375 of the companies was Filipino and in 57, American. The companies organized by Filipinos had ₱43,896,000 of subscribed capital and ₱18,006,000 paid up, while companies incorporated by Americans had ₱7,148,000 of subscribed capital and ₱3,209,000 paid up. In 1935, there were 295 companies registered, of which 201 were Filipinos and 61 Americans. The authorized capital was ₱58,552,000, of which ₱22,227,000 was subscribed, ₱4,448,000 paid up in cash and ₱13,802,000 paid up in property. The Filipinos had ₱10,409,000 of the subscribed capital and ₱8,067,000 paid up, and the American companies had ₱6,220,000 subscribed and ₱5,051,000 paid up. Mining companies, investment companies, management and engineering companies and others allied with the mining industry made up the majority of the companies and about 90 percent of the subscribed capital. A number of investment companies were organized by wealthy sugar planters and owners of sugar centrals to manage their investments in mines and other enterprises.

There were 143 partnerships registered in 1936 with ₱6,462,000 of capital, all paid up. These include 36 Filipino partnerships with ₱1,111,000 capital, six American partnerships with ₱617,000 capital and 84 Chinese companies with ₱2,649,000. Several large brokerage firms were included. In 1935, there were 108 partnerships registered with ₱8,387,000 capital, including 24 Filipino partnerships with ₱329,000, eight American partnerships with ₱6,223,000 and 55 Chinese partnerships with ₱1,289,000.

Dealings on the Manila Stock Exchange were far more active in 1936 than in any previous year and a new exchange, the International Stock Exchange, was organized and started business in October, 1936. A third exchange, the Central Exchange of the Philippines, was organized but did not start trading until after the end of the year. There was a total of 1,074,868,290 shares traded in on the two exchanges, of which 978,879,647 shares was on the Manila Stock Exchange and 95,988,643 shares on the International Stock Exchange compared with 183,524,353 shares in 1935 and 71,742,319 shares in 1934. The total value of the 1936 transactions was ₱445,122,866, against ₱45,539,316 in 1935 and ₱28,253,820 in 1934. The greatest monthly turn over was in December when 180,537,079 shares were sold, but the value was only ₱47,343,719, or less than in any of the preceding five months. The greatest monthly value was in October when the value of shares traded in reached a total of ₱69,339,424, but the total number of shares sold was only 158,189,780. The greatest daily volume was in December 29, when the turn-over was 15,123,835 shares.

The Swan, Culbertson and Fritz index, based on average value of stocks of 10 producing mines compared with average value in March, 1935, opened the year at 52, reached 125 by July 1 and attained a high point of 256 on October 22, averaging 245 in October. It declined to 163 on November 11, shortly recovered to 218, again declined to 138 on December 2 and had recovered to 207 by December 31.

Trademarks. — Applications for registration of trademarks totaled 398 in 1936, of which 245 were approved. In 1935, 321 applications were received and 170 approved. Registrations in 1936 included 93 for American applicants and 26 for Filipinos. In 1935, the respective figures were 69 and 19.

POLITICAL

The National Assembly in its first regular session passed a record number of bills, including several revenue bills increasing existing taxes and creating new ones. Among the taxes increased were the inheritance tax, income tax, firearm license fees, tax on mining production, tax on retail leaf tobacco dealers, taxes on gasoline and lubricating oil and motor vehicle license fees. New taxes include an amusement tax and a privilege tax on brokers and market vendors. The duty and excise tax on beer were increased, the former subject to American approval. A bill was passed giving the President of the Philippines the right to increase duties by a maximum of 400 percent and decrease them by a maximum of 75 percent, by executive order. This also awaits American approval. The Flag Law was amended by increasing the margin to 15 percent, in favor of Philippine and American-made goods, and by further providing for a 15 percent margin of preference to Philippine and American distributing entities. Provision was made for a comprehensive census in 1937. A number of labor bills were passed, including a bill providing for a Court of Industrial Relations and one fixing a minimum wage for Government employees. Agriculture was the beneficiary of bills providing for warehouses for copra and tobacco, making appropriations for extermination of pests and diseases, creating a livestock promotion fund and a buntal fiber stabilization fund and creating a National Produce Exchange to facilitate trading in agricultural products. A new comprehensive mining law and a Bureau of Mines were provided to regulate mining and a Securities Commission to protect investors. Aviation was encouraged by an appropriation for airmail contracts. An export tax was imposed on shells and an embargo on buntal fiber. The President was authorized to negotiate with the President of the United States toward the holding of an economic and trade conference. A bill creating a Government-owned National Merchandising Corporation to improve the competitive position of Filipino retailers failed of approval, as did a bill to impose a ten percent tax on certain luxuries, including automobiles.

Among the bills passed by the National Assembly were the following:

Bill No. 11*.—Prohibits the exportation of buntal fibers, seeds or seedlings.

Bill No. 67*.—Amending the Bookkeeping Law by requiring that entries in both journals and ledgers must be kept in or translated into English, Spanish or a native Filipino language.

Bill No. 177*.—An Act to fix a minimum daily wage of ₱1.00 for laborers employed in public works.

Bill No. 301*.—Waterworks Fund.—Appropriates ₱2,000,000 to constitute a revolving fund for the construction of provincial and municipal waterworks systems. The ₱2,000,000 appropriation will be released only on certification by the Auditor General and the Secretary of Finance that such funds are available from current revenues. If such certification cannot be given, the President of the Philippines is authorized to issue Commonwealth Government bonds in the amount of P2,000,000 for the purposes of the Act.

Bill No. 572*.—Authorizes the Secretary of Labor to promulgate and enforce rules and regulations to promote the safety of laborers and employees in mines, quarries and metallurgical operations.

Bill No. 700*.—An Act providing for compulsory arbitration by creating a Court of Industrial Relations.

Bill No. 727*.—Preventing the Use of Registered Containers.—Provides that containers may be registered with the Bureau of Commerce (similar to trademark registration).

Bill No. 734*.—Directing the Philippine National Bank and the National Development Company to establish, operate and maintain warehouses for copra.

Bill No. 922*.—Provides for registration of labor unions with the Department of Labor.

Bill No. 929*.—Appropriating P1,100,000, of which, P600,000 is for the purchase of the Ayuntamiento office building acquired by the Commonwealth Government from the City, and P500,000 as a gift to the City to aid it in building a new City Hall.

Bill No. 1183*.—Amends Article 2444 of the Revised Administrative Code by removing the limitation on the power of the Manila Municipal Government to fix license fees for dealers in automobiles and accessories and in some other goods.

Bill No. 1337*.—Increasing the inheritance tax rates.

Bill No. 1465*.—Amending Law 4142 by returning to Municipal Governments the power to fix their own slaughterhouse fees.

Bill No. 1489*.—Increasing the specific tax on beer and other fermented liquors to 12-1/2 centavos per liter.

Bill No. 1490*.—Increasing the tariff on malt beverages and ciders.

Bill No. 1535*.—Amending Section 14 of the Philippine Tariff Act by exempting forest products from the payment of wharfage charges.

Bill No. 1874*.—Airmail Contracts.—Authorizes the Director of Posts to enter into contracts for the transportation of mails by air between any points within the Philippines and between the Philippines and foreign countries.

Bill No. 1875*.—Increasing income tax rates.

Bill No. 1912*.—Increasing firearm license fees and reducing the bond or deposit required.

Bill No. 1926*.—Authorizing the Philippine National Bank and the National Development Company to establish and maintain warehouses for tobacco.

Bill No. 1960*.—Provides that the possession of misbranded articles in quantities in excess of the reasonable needs of the possessor shall constitute prima facie evidence of possession with intent to sell.

Bill No. 1991*.—Creating a Philippine Livestock Promotion Fund for the introduction, preparation and distribution of purebred and improved breeding animals.

Bill No. 2120*.—Creates a Bureau of Civil Aviation under the Department of Public Works and Communications.

Bill No. 2126*.—Amends Section 1 of Act 3592 (the Port Works Fund Act) by providing that the fund may be used for the construction, improvement and maintenance of lighthouses and other aids to navigation and for airports and landing fields.

Bill No. 2149*.—Appropriates ₱250,000 to be spent for reforestation and afforestation of watersheds, denuded areas and cogon or open lands within forests reserves, national parks, etc.

Bill No. 2163*.—Fixes October 17 of every year as the date for opening the regular session of the National Assembly.

Bill No. 2187*.—Budget Act.

Bill No. 2219*.—Imposes a percentage tax of one-fourth of one percent on the total selling price of stocks, bonds or other securities.

Bill No. 2245*.—Appropriates ₱1,500,000 for the taking of a census.

Bill No. 2262*.—Authorizes the investment of funds under the control of the National Loan and Investment Board, including the Postal Savings Bank Fund, as advances to the Insular Government for the construction of toll bridges.

Bill No. 2281*.—Increases Flag Law margin

Bill No. 2290*.—Mining Law.

Bill No. 2297*.—Increasing the tax on gasoline to five centavos a liter and on lubricating oil to four centavos a liter.

Bill No. 2311*.—Increasing license fees for motor vehicles.

Bill No. 2312*, Cedula Tax.—Provides that in provinces where the cedula tax is fixed at ₱1.00, the proceeds shall go equally to the province and municipality wherein collected. In provinces where the tax is fixed at ₱2.00, the extra peso shall accrue to the school fund of the municipality wherein collected.

Bill No. 2313*.—Provides that textbooks needed for use in the elementary grades of the public schools shall be printed either by the Bureau of Printing or by private printers in the Philippines.

Bill No. 2326*.—Creates a National Power Corporation.

Bill No. 2329*.—Securities Act.

Bill No. 2335*, Amusement Tax.—Imposing a tax equivalent to five percent of the gross receipts of theaters, cinemas, concert halls and other places of amusement whose admission prices exceed 40 centavos.

Bill No. 2336*.—Flexible Tariff Act.

Bill No. 2339*.—Creates a Bureau of Mines under the Department of Agriculture and Commerce.

Bill No. 2343*, Radio Broadcasting.—Creates an Advisory Board of three members to be appointed by the President, which will study ways and means for the nationalization or acquisition by the Government of radio broadcasting. The Board will also censor all programs, whether sustaining or sponsored.

Bill No. 2344*.—Appropriates ₱500,000 to be used by the National Development Company in stabilizing the price of buntal fibers.

Bill No. 2356*.—Increases the merchants' privilege tax to ₱4.00 a year.

Bill No. 2359*.—Imposes a penalty on any person found in possession of untaxed articles subject to specific tax, or unlicensed apparatus for the manufacture of distilled spirits or apparatus which may be used in the manufacture of articles subject to specific tax.

Bill No. 2366*.—Makes Appari and Jose Panganiban (formerly known as Mambulao) Customs ports of entry.

Bill No. 2370*.—Provides for the liquidation of the Teachers' Retirement and Disability Fund.

Bill No. 2371*.—Provides for the liquidation of the Constabulary Pension and Retirement Fund.

Bill No. 2372*.—Provides for the liquidation of the Bureau of Health Pension and Retirement Fund.

Bill No. 2373*.—Creates a Government Service Insurance System to which the employees and the Government will contribute equally. This will replace the three pension funds mentioned above.

Bill No. 2378.—Exempts from the sales tax trading in agricultural products and salt on trading centers or produce exchanges organized or supervised by the Government, when such trading does not result in actual physical delivery of products.

Bill No. 2383*.—Authorizes the Manila Railroad Company to construct toll viaducts, toll bridges and toll tunnels.

Bill No. 2386*.—Reorganizes the National Development Company as a public corporation.

Bill No. 2392*.—Creates a National Produce Exchange.

Bill No. 2395*, Trade Conference.—Authorizes the President of the Philippines to negotiate with the President of the United States towards the holding of an economic trade conference.

Bill No. 2398*.—Increases the fixed tax on retail leaf tobacco dealers from ₱20.00 to ₱30.00 per annum.

U. S. NAVY DAY CELEBRATION

American Fleets Work for Stability in World Relations, Says Admiral Marquardt

BY REAR-ADMIRAL E. J. MARQUARDT, U. S. NAVY

(Former Commandant, Sixteenth Naval District)

Commander, Yangtze Patrol (China)

"We celebrate today (October 26, 1936) America's fifteenth annual Navy Day. It was in 1922 just after our government had let the world in a renunciation of comparative naval building and had sacrificed definite naval superiority on the altar of international concord, that the Navy League of the United States had the happy inspiration of sponsoring our first Navy Day and advocating an American Navy of Treaty Strength.

It was altogether fitting and appropriate that the birthday of that great American, Theodore Roosevelt, should be selected as the date for the annual observance of Navy Day, because so much of his public life was devoted to American seapower and the needs of national defense.

On the occasion of the first observance of Navy Day the great maritime powers of the world had met a short time before at Washington and agreed upon the relative sizes of their respective naval establishments. That was the first time in the history of human relations that independent states had undertaken to limit and restrict their sea defenses in accordance with an international formula amicably arrived at and acceptable to all. The balance wheel of common sense, on its pedestal of security for all without fear or favor, had been started spinning. But that balance wheel today seems wobbly on its pivots. The world is full of unrest, it is uneasy and unsettled. Now, more than before, does our Navy work for stability in world relations; now, more than before, is the Navy the surest guaranty and safeguard of peace for our country. More and more, as the world moves on, do the lessons of sea power stand out clearly as they have been written so plainly in history's pages from the days of the ancient galleys to the wonderful ships devised by modern man to cruise the ocean and fly the air.

And as part of the Navy is the U. S. Marine Corps, whose motto "Semper Fidelis" has been their creed and inspiration for glorious pages in history of their own making.

The Navy's activities in the Manila area from a strictly commercial standpoint are probably known or conceived by so very

PRESIDENT QUEZON'S RADIO SPEECH

Delivered by President Manuel L. Quezon at Washington, D. C., April 5, 1937, at 7:30 A. M., Manila Time.

MY FELLOW FILIPINOS:

I am very happy to have this opportunity of addressing you today. It is a long way from Washington to the Philippines and I am beginning to feel homesick, but I am here in the performance of a most important duty that I hope will bring happiness to our people. I wish to speak to you on this occasion on two subjects: the woman suffrage and the immediate Philippine independence. I wish to reiterate my hope that the women of our country may at last use their right to vote. I hope all the women who possess the qualifications required by law will not only register but vote favorably on the plebiscite upon this question. Filipino women are not as yet in full possession of all their rights and unless they make it one of their objects in the National Administration it will take a long time before all their rights are secured. The Filipinos will be willing to seek the advice and collaboration of their mothers, wives and daughters in public affairs and as they seek them in their private business. The Filipino woman is the equal of the best in the world and there is no reason why she should not enjoy all the rights and privileges of women in more progressive countries. I think that all I can tell you is that I am for woman suffrage. Don't let the world be disappointed when the day for the decision of this momentous question comes. Let the world see that our women will have all the political rights that women in other advanced countries have.

Purpose of Tydings-McDuffie Law

Now I want to speak to you on these questions of Philippine independence which have struck me at this time. You are already informed that I have recommended that the period for the granting of independence be shortened so that the Philippines may establish its republic on the 31st of December, 1938 or on the 4th of July, 1939. I understand some people have been surprised that I should make such a proposal at this time, yet any one who has followed closely my public career will have expected me to do so. Moreover, it is well known that the majority of our people in accepting the Tydings-McDuffie Law have accepted it in the hope and expectation that if after it had been enacted it had not been demonstrated that certain modifications are necessary the Filipinos will have the right to present to the government of the United States from point of view on this modification and the Congress is to give it as in the interest of the Philippines and perhaps no less than in the interest of the United States that the period for the granting of independence be shortened, as I have stated before.

Why have we been granted these ten years from the establishment of the Commonwealth before independence is recognized? The main reason was because in the experience of the government the Philippines needed these ten years to readjust her national economy to the conditions that will prevail when independence shall have been granted. The Independence Law provided a certain machinery whereby it was the hope that the Philippines within ten years will be able to readjust their national economy to the independence regime. We accepted the independence law upon the assumption that none of its provisions will be amended except with the consent of the Filipino people. Under the provisions of this law the trade relations between the United States and the Philippines were to be on certain basis and we took for granted that this basis would not be altered during the ten years of the transition period.

Congress Amends Law Unilaterally

As a matter of fact, however, even after the independence law was accepted by our people the Congress of the United States started to amend those provisions of the law regulating our trade relations with America. It would appear, therefore, that Congress thinks that it has the right at any time and at its will to change the trade relations between America and the Philippines regardless of the provisions of the Independence Act. Under these circumstances, to continue in this present status is simply to cause economic ruin for the Philippines. It is absolutely necessary that we may be able to place our trade relations with America on a more stable basis and there is but one way to accomplish this purpose, namely, a treaty between the government of the United States and the independent Philippine republic. So long as the Philippines remains under the American flag, Congress will always feel at liberty to amend any of these laws affecting the Philippines. But once we are independent, if we could secure a treaty from the Government of the United States similar in terms to the provisions of the Independence Act regulating our trade relations, Congress will have to respect that treaty during the time of its existence. And so I have proposed that the Philippines be granted independence and I hope within as short a period of time as possible with the idea that there may be entered a treaty between America and the Philippines whereby the trade relations between the United States and the Philippines as provided in the Independence Act may be agreed upon in the form of a treaty between our two countries, and I am hopeful that such a proposal will not meet any serious objection on the part of the government of the United States. Moreover, I think it will not be impossible to secure special trade relations between America and the Philippines after the third year period shall have elapsed.

Answers Stand Taken by Sugar Industry

I heard that many of our business men in the Philippines, especially those engaged in the sugar industry, are against my proposal to shorten the period for the granting of independence. Moreover, I have been told that some of these men are in fact thinking that the proposition which I have submitted to the government of the United States is going to ruin them. I want to say to these gentlemen that the present situation of the Philippines affords them no guaranty that they will during the period provided in the Independence Act be allowed to send to the United States the amount of sugar free of duty that is allowed under the terms of that Act. Even now there is pending before Congress a bill taxing the sugar coming from the Philippine Islands, a tax which is greater than the tax which has been levied heretofore and which under the previous Act was to return to the Filipino farmer and sugar producer while independently the tax has not only been raised but there was no provision in that bill for this tax to be returned to the Philippines. Who can assure you, sugar barons of the Philippines, who are now protesting against what I am doing which is for their own protection—who can assure you that next year the Congress of the United States is not going to increase further the tax on your sugar? Who can assure that next year the Congress of the United States is not going to reduce the amount of sugar that you can send free of duty to this country? The suggestion that we should remain under the present status is tantamount to an economic suicide on your part. It is only under my proposal that you can find safety and security of your investments. But do not forget that I am prepared, if necessary, to get independence for the Philippines even if I would fail to secure for our products the benefit of the market of the United States. The time has come when the Filipino people must decide whether they shall be the masters of their own destiny or not. If we are not willing to assume all the responsibilities of a free people then let us quit talking about freedom and independence and let us sell our birthright for one million tons of sugar.

Fortunately for you and fortunately for the whole country the authorities in Washington are concerned about the future of our people, and they are trying to do everything they can to find a formula whereby we may be independent without very serious injury to our country from all possible unwise legislation that may bring harm to our people.

Independence with Trade Preference

I want you to have faith in me and I hope you will not embarrass my work here by sending protests before you know what you are protesting about. If I succeed in getting the President to recommend to Congress that the period for the granting of independence be shortened and at the same time that the President be authorized to enter into negotiations with the Republic of the Philip-pires whereby the trade relations between America and the Philippine Islands will be at least 15 years as provided in the Independence Act, nothing better could happen to our country and to our people.

I have agreed to the creation of a committee of experts that at the same time that it is studying the different aspects of our trade relations it may also consider how the question of granting independence will affect our national economy. I have appointed to this committee as our representatives Secretary Yulo, of Justice; Commissioner Paredes; Assemblyman Romero, the majority floor leader; Assemblyman Roxas, the minority floor leader; Mr. Elizalde, a member of the National Economic Council; Dean Conrado Benitez, of the College of Commerce of the University of the Philippines; and Mr. Benito Razon, as technical adviser. This is a very strong committee which, jointly with other members and other American members, will study the whole and every phase of the Philippine question. They will hold hearings in America as well as in the Philippines so that every one who has something to suggest may be heard. After they have finished their labor—and I expect that their labor will be finished next autumn,—a report will be submitted by them with their recommendation. This committee is not the same as the committee contemplated by the provisions of the Independence Act. This is a committee of experts. The other committee will be a committee which on behalf of the government of the United States and on behalf of the government of the Philippines will proceed to make recommendations as to our future trade relations after independence shall have been granted.

Now, my fellow citizens, my time is about up. Don't be panicky, don't be scared with anything that you hear or see printed by the papers as to what might happen to the Philippines. None of you is more interested than I am, not even the man, who owns the sugar factory, or the man who owns the coconut oil factory, or the tobacco factory, not one of you is more interested than I am in securing for the Philippines the economic stability and the consequent prosperity for our people. Even though I have not a cent in any of those industries, I am at least as interested, as every one of you are, for it is my duty to look after the welfare of our people. Now, I say good-bye to you and I hope you will sleep well after what I told you.

By reason of war between the United States of America and Spain, the latter, after her vain effort to defend herself against the combined forces of the American and Filipino troops in the islands, had relinquished her sovereignty over the Philippines in favor of the former by virtue of a treaty of peace concluded at Paris on December 10, 1898; and, from August 13 of that year up to the establishment of the Commonwealth of the Philippines on November 15, 1935, the Government of the United States had exercised complete control of the Archipelago. The political tie that linked the Philippines with the United States as a result of her conquest has not, however, been totally dissolved by the Tydings-McDuffie Law, although by its provisions complete and absolute independence of the Filipinos is assured after a transition period of ten years from the establishment of the Commonwealth.

It is, therefore, proper and fitting that in recognition of the good work the United States has done and is still doing for this country, we, Filipinos, should not only be thankful to her present government and people but also grateful to all those American presidents and other statesmen and heroes who conceived, fought and died for Freedom and Democracy. Hence, this dedication to the Presidents and Government of the United States of America.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE PRESIDENTS *

Thirty-one men have served as President of the United States, but Mr. Roosevelt is called the thirty-second President because Grover Cleveland served two separate, disconnected terms as twenty-second and twenty-fourth President.

The story of our Presidents is an outline of American history. Here are all the great political battles, the decisive issues which shaped our national destiny, all the momentous events abroad which gave direction to American politics and policies.

*Compiled by the Editor from different sources of information.

All of these men were American born. Seventeen came largely of English ancestry, six of Scotch-Irish; two were mostly Scotch, and four were of Dutch descent. One was chiefly Welsh, and one Scotch and Dutch.

Sixteen were sons of farmers and planters. Four were sons of lawyers, three of merchants, three of clergymen, and one each of a doctor, a constable, a tanner, a blacksmith, and an iron maker.

Nine were born to very poor families. The others were born in varied circumstances, mostly middle-class folks. Washington became one of the great land owners of his day. Abraham Lincoln entered the White House almost penniless, but since the Civil War most of our Presidents have been men of moderate means. The ancestral estate of President Franklin D. Roosevelt overlooking the Hudson River at Hyde Park, N. Y., is one of the most extensive in that section of the United States.

Twenty-two of our Presidents went to college, several by their own efforts. Fifteen were soldiers in one or more of our national wars, twenty-one were lawyers, fourteen served in the House of Representatives and twelve in the Senate. Nine were Vice Presidents. Nine were members of the Cabinet, and thirteen were governors of their States. Seven were ministers abroad. Four were in the Continental Congress. Adams and Jefferson signed the Declaration of Independence. Washington and Madison signed the Constitution. Wilson signed the League of Nations covenant.

All except Buchanan were married. Tyler, Fillmore, Benjamin Harrison, Theodore Roosevelt, and Wilson were married twice. Tyler had the largest family, seven children by each marriage. Washington, Madison, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, and Harding were childless. John Adams was the father of a President, and William Henry Harrison was the grandfather of one.

Theodore Roosevelt was the youngest man to assume the office, 42, and William Henry Harrison the oldest, at 68. Grant, Cleveland, Pierce, Polk, and Garfield were inaugurated before they were 50. Garfield died youngest, 49, from an assassin's bullet. John Adams lived longest, 90.

Lincoln, Garfield, and McKinley were assassinated. The assassin of Lincoln was killed by pursuing soldiers. Those of Garfield and McKinley were legally executed. Jackson was shot at while in office. Theodore Roosevelt was wounded when he was the third-party candidate in 1912. Jackson was wounded in a duel in which his opponent was killed, before he became President. Franklin D. Roosevelt narrowly escaped the fire of the mad Zangara at Miami, Florida, on February 15, 1933, only three weeks before his inauguration.

Nine Presidents belonged to the Episcopal Church, seven to the Presbyterian, four Methodist, four Unitarian, two Dutch Reformed, one each Baptists, Disciples, Congregational, and Quaker.

Ten were elected twice and two refused third terms. Seven served eight years. William Henry Harrison served but one month. Four were never elected President, but merely served out unexpired terms.

Five were named James, three William, three John, and two Andrew. Three fought in the Revolution, five in the War of 1812, three against Mexico, six in the Civil War, and two against Spain.

Eight were born in Virginia and seven in Ohio. Six were residents of Ohio when elected, five of Virginia, six of New York, and three each of Massachusetts and Tennessee.

Herbert Hoover, the Republican nominee in 1928, was the first President to be elected from a State west of the Mississippi River.

Gettysburg Address In President Lincoln's Own Handwriting

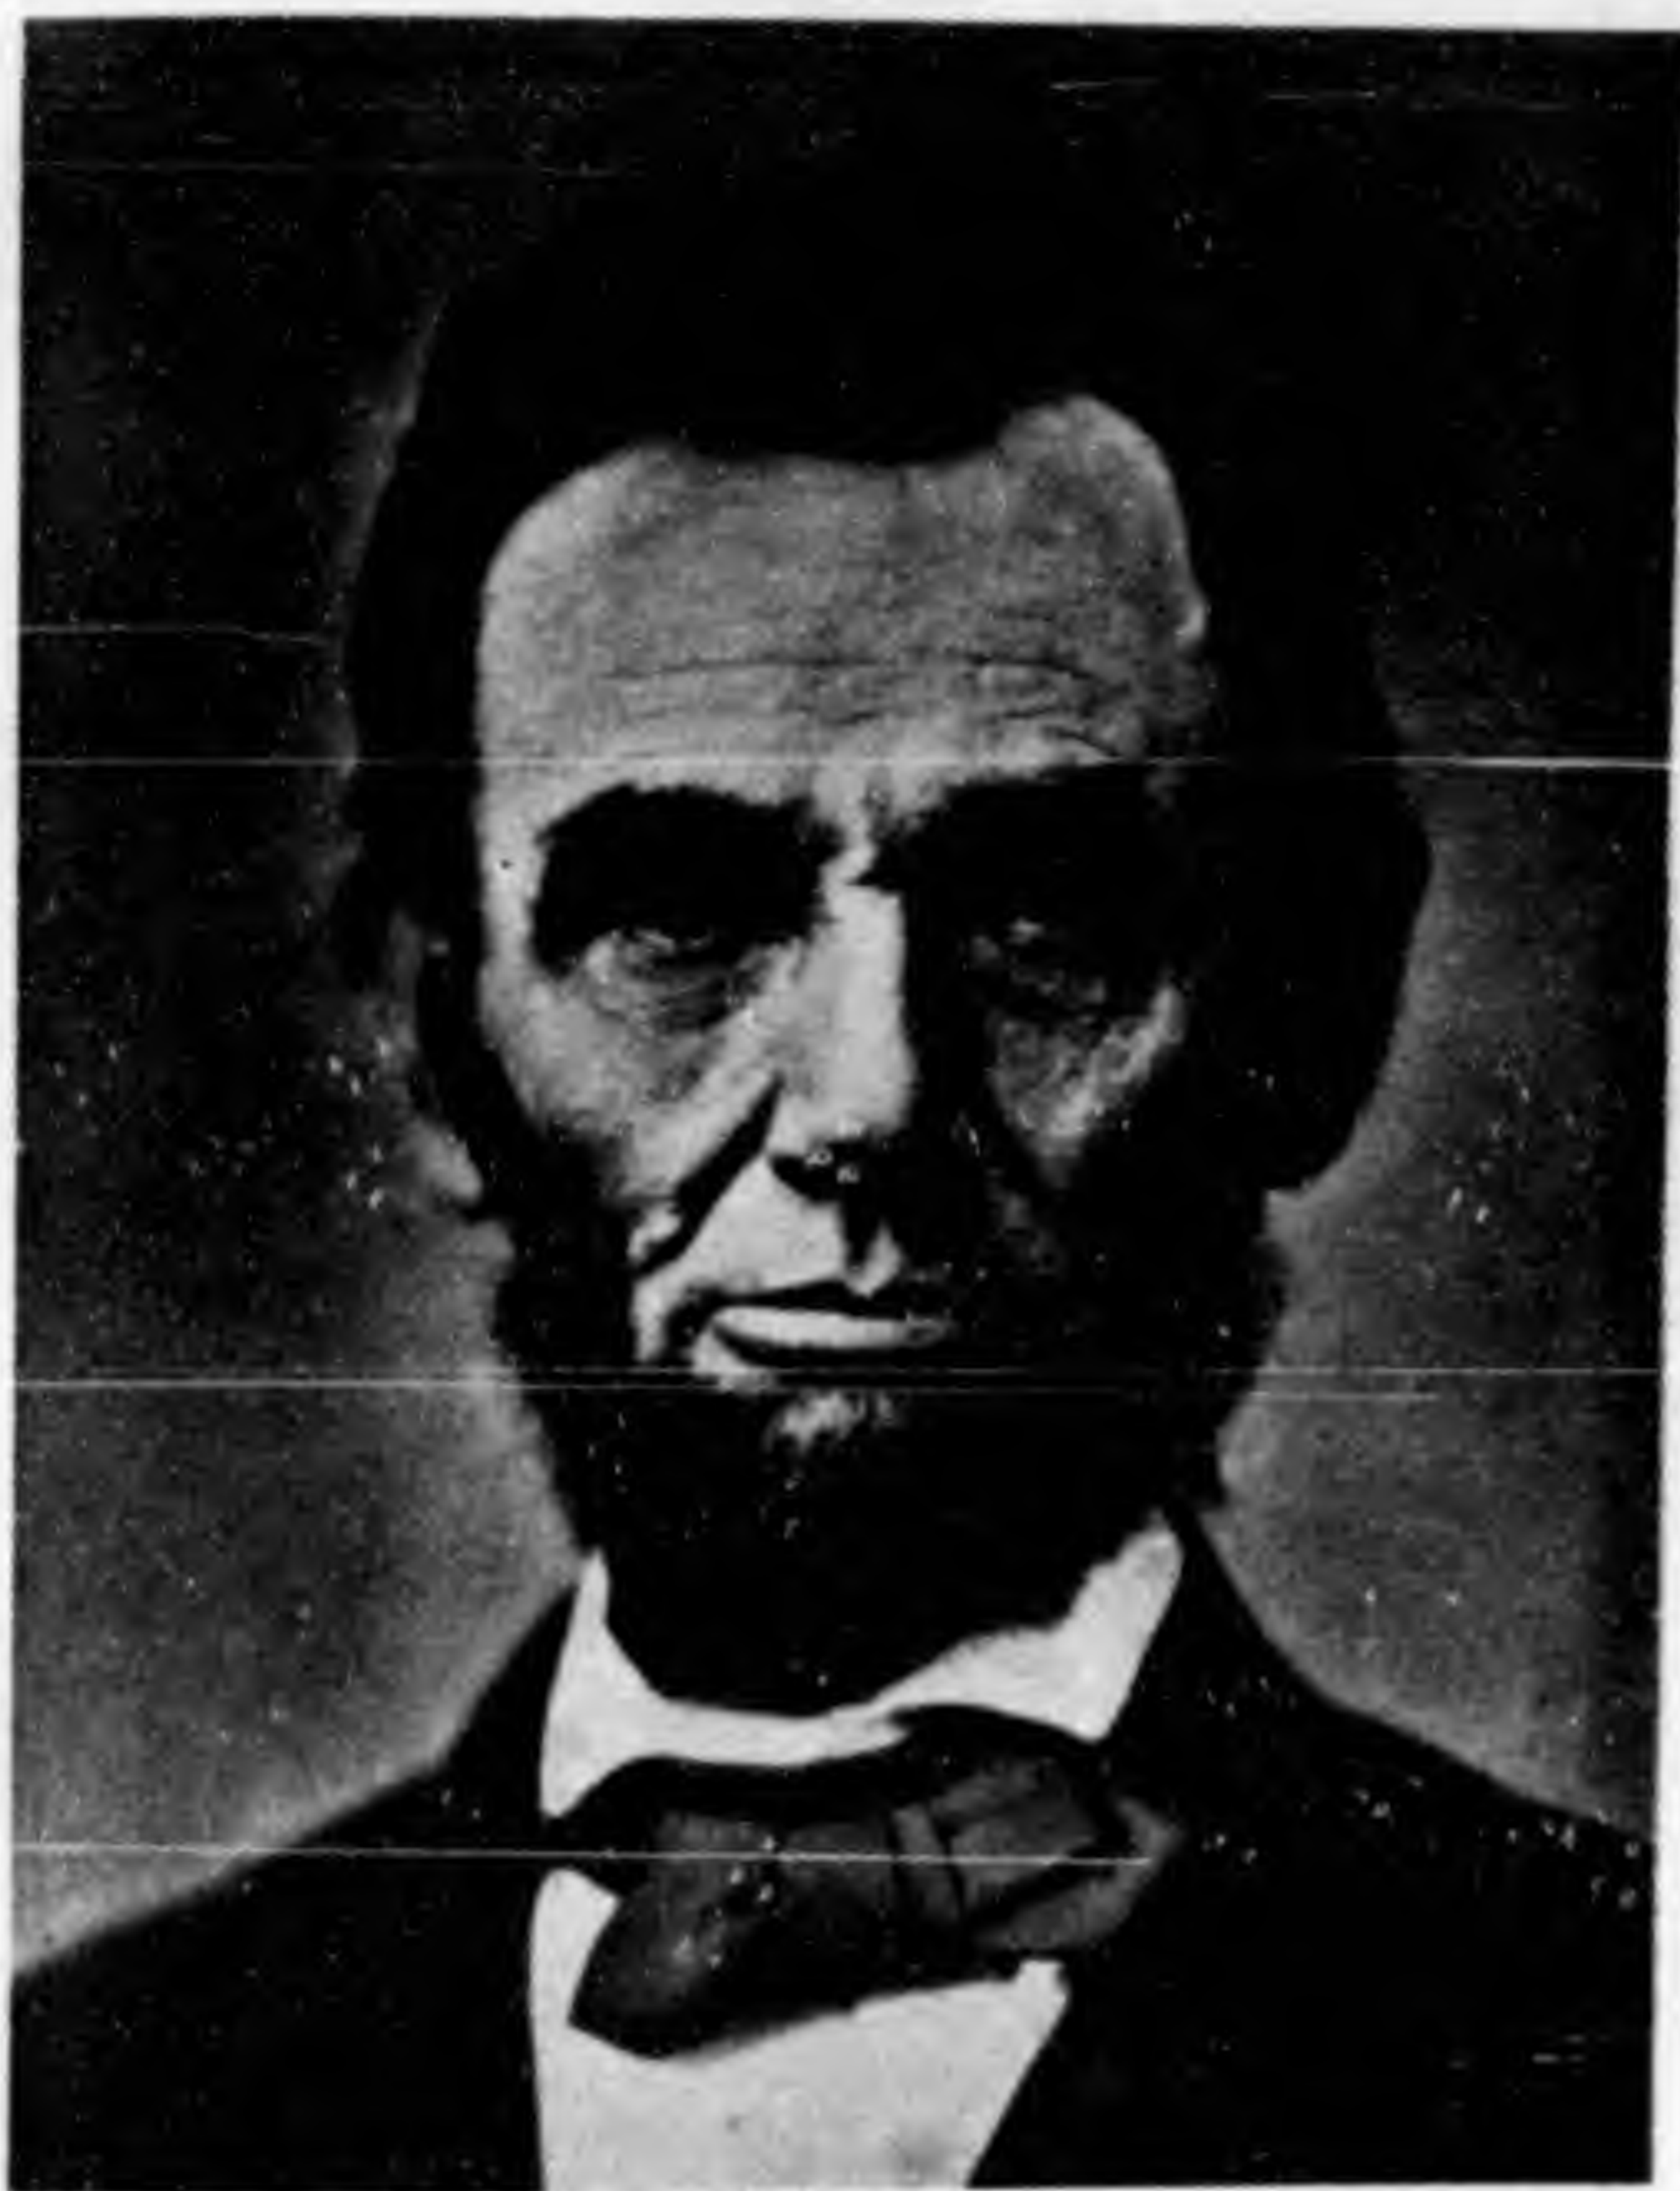

Executive Mansion.

Washington, _____, 1863

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth, upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created equal."

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived, and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of it, as a final resting place for those who here have given that the nation might live. This we may, in all propriety do. But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow, this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have hallowed it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here; while it can never forget what they did here.

It is rather for us, the living, ^{we have no special} ~~to stand here~~ dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that, from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they here gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that the nation, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

EXCERPTS FROM PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS DELIVERED JANUARY 20, 1937

(Reuters Service said: "President Franklin Delano Roosevelt began his second four-year term to-day (January 20, 1937), emphatically promising the government will continue to make life better for more than 40,000,000 under-privileged Americans. In the worst inaugural weather in years, he delivered his speech bareheaded to the lusty cheers of thousands.")

"We of the Republic pledge ourselves to drive from the temple of our ancient faith those who had profaned it.

"Autocratic powers . . . have been challenged and beaten. The legend that they are unbeatable has been shattered.

"We are beginning to abandon our tolerance of the abuse of power by those who betray for profit.

"We are fashioning an instrument of power for the establishment of a morally better world.

"To hold our progress today, however, is more difficult. Dulled consciences, irresponsibility and ruthlessness have not entirely disappeared. Such symptoms of prosperity may become portents of disaster.

"I see millions whose daily lives in city and on farm continue under conditions labeled indecent by so called polite society.

"I see millions denied . . . recreations and opportunity, and millions lacking the means to buy products of farm and factory — and by their poverty denying work . . . to many other millions.

"I see one-third of the nation ill-housed and ill-cared for.

"We are moving toward an era of good feeling, but we realize there can be no era of good feeling until we have men of good will.

"The test of our progress is not whether we can add more to those who have too much. It is whether we can add enough for those having too little. If I know aught of the spirit and purpose of our nation, we will carry on.

"Nearly all of us realize that as the intricacies of human relationships increase, so the power to govern them also must increase—the power to halt evil is the power to do good.

"Out of the confusion, many voices rise in understanding of the dominant public need . . . in taking again the oath of office as President of the United States, I assume the solemn obligation of leading the American people forward along the road over which they have chosen to advance."

FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT

32nd President

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, 32nd President of the United States, was born on January 30, 1882, at Hyde Park, New York. He was educated at Groton School, Massachusetts, and at Harvard University, where he graduated in 1905. He served in the United States Army during World War I, and was promoted to the rank of Major General. He was elected Governor of New York in 1928, and served from 1929 to 1932. He was then elected Vice President of the United States in 1932, and served from 1933 to 1945.

After his death, his wife, Eleanor Roosevelt, continued to serve the country. She was a prominent social reformer and a leading voice for the disabled. She was elected to the United Nations Security Council in 1945, and served as the first woman to hold that position. She was also the first woman to be elected to the United Nations General Assembly in 1946. She died on November 22, 1962.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt

The second member of a distinguished Colonial Dutch family to attain the Presidency, Franklin Delano Roosevelt carries on a tradition of public life somewhat akin to that of the Adams and Harrison presidential families. A fifth cousin to Theodore Roosevelt, 26th President, his service has been in the opposing major political party. In the Wilson Democratic Administration, he was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as Theodore Roosevelt was in the McKinley Republican Administration. As Theodore Roosevelt was elected Republican Governor of New York, so Franklin Roosevelt was elected Democratic Governor.

The son of James Roosevelt, a man of wealth, Franklin Roosevelt, although by profession a lawyer, was free to follow a political career without economic embarrassment. His service in the New York State Senate acquainted him with legislative procedure while, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Governor, he acquired experience as an executive in both federal and state governments. Nominated of the Democratic Party in 1920 for the Vice-Presidency with James M. Cox of Ohio, he was schooled in major political strategy. His political career has been so continuous that only intermittently has he engaged in the practice of law.

Mr. Roosevelt came to the White House on the highest tide of both popular and electoral votes ever cast, having drawn the support of members of every political faith. Champion of the Forgotten Man, the interests of President Roosevelt have been humanitarian, and his aim to improve the economic condition of every citizen. Attaining the Presidency amid world-wide depression, his inauguration was followed by the historic bank-holiday proclamation of March 6, 1933. As President Monroe's Administration was called the "Era of Good Feeling", so President Roosevelt's began as the "New Deal." *

The Philippine Independence Law, known as the Tydings-McDuffie Act, was signed by President Roosevelt on March 24, 1934. It was among the first important acts enacted by the Congress of the United States since he stepped into the White House. The Constitution of the Philippines was also signed by him on March 23, 1935.

On the strength of his accomplishments under the New Deal, President Roosevelt was reelected in 1936. He was first elected in 1932.

Anna Eleanor Roosevelt

Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the wife of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in her own person adds to the Roosevelt tradition in the White House, for, as daughter of Elliott and Anna Hall Roosevelt, she is a distant cousin of her husband, the President. She was born in New York City, October 11, 1884. She was educated at private schools and has taken a systematic interest in educational work. Always keenly interested in political affairs, her equipment fits her admirably for the exacting position of Mistress of the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt was Vice-Principal of the Tudor City School, New York, and also established the Val K. L. Shop, a species of vocational enterprise engaged in the making by hand of fine furniture. From 1924 to 1928 she was finance chairman of the Women's Division, New York State Democratic Committee. In 1928 she was a member of the advisory committee in charge of women's activities of the Democratic National Committee. She is a member of the New York State League of Women Voters. Mrs. Roosevelt also edited a magazine devoted to infant care and welfare. Even after assuming the duties of First Lady she continued her manifold educational and humanitarian interests. She is an Episcopalian.*

EXCERPTS FROM PRESIDENT FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS DELIVERED JANUARY 20, 1937

[Reuter Service said: "President Franklin Delano Roosevelt began his second four-year term to-day (January 20, 1937) emphatically promising the government will continue to make life better for more than 40,000,000 under-privileged Americans. In the worst inaugural weather in years, he delivered his speech bareheaded to the lusty cheers of thousands."]

"We of the Republic pledge ourselves to drive from the temple of our ancient faith those who had profaned it.

"Autocratic powers ... have been challenged and beaten. The legend that they are unbeatable has been shattered.

"We are beginning to abandon our tolerance of the abuse of power by those who betray for profit.

"We are fashioning an instrument of power for the establishment of a morally better world.

"To hold our progress today, however, is more difficult. Dulled consciences, irresponsibility and ruthlessness have not entirely disappeared. Such symptoms of prosperity may become portents of disaster.

"I see millions whose daily lives in city and on farm continue under conditions labeled indecent by so called polite society.

"I see millions denied ... recreations and opportunity, and millions lacking the means to buy products of farm and factory — and by their poverty denying work to many other millions.

"I see one-third of the nation ill-housed and ill-cared for.

"We are moving toward an era of good feeling, but we realize there can be no era of good feeling until we have men of good will.

"The test of our progress is not whether we can add more to those who have too much. It is whether we can add enough for those having too little. If I know aught of the spirit and purpose of our nation, we will carry on.

"Nearly all of us realize that as the intricacies of human relationships increase, so the power to govern them also must increase—the power to halt evil is the power to do good.

"Out of the confusion, many voices rise in understanding of the dominant public need ... in taking again the oath of office as President of the United States, I assume the solemn obligation of leading the American people forward along the road over which they have chosen to advance."

HON. J. WELDON JONES
Acting U. S. High Commissioner to the Philippines
(1936-1937)

THE NEW U.S. HIGH COMMISSIONER TO THE PHILIPPINES

Paul V. McNutt, appointed American High Commissioner to the Philippines, was met in Shanghai, China, April 21, 1937, by a delegation of American and Chinese officials.

He said:

"My first job is in the Philippines. I will be there as long as President Roosevelt desires.

"I enter upon the performance of my duties in the Philippines as high commissioner with great enthusiasm and deep interest, conscious of the opportunity to render public service of the highest order to the peoples of the Philippines and the United States.

"The independence program for the Islands has passed the initial stages but there remain problems awaiting solution and question regarding which decisions are imperative.

"A large measure of autonomy in administration of domestic affairs has been entrusted by the independence act to Filipinos through the Commonwealth government inaugurated under that act. This was a wise Congressional provision because the people of the Islands thereby were enabled through the medium of their own officials and in their own way to work out a program of adjustment preparatory to independence in 1946.

"Although the United States continues to exercise sovereignty over the Islands it is our policy not only to avoid unnecessary interference with this autonomous authority so long as it is exercised in accordance with the purposes and provisions of the independence act and of the constitution of the Commonwealth government, but also to give helpful encouragement to the new government in a sincere spirit of cooperation.

"Among important matters to be considered in the immediate future are first, provisions regarding neutralization of the Islands; second, the status of our future trade relations with the Islands; and third, economic adjustments which must take place in the Islands before economic as well as political independence is achieved.

"Interested departments of the United States government are giving earnest consideration to the problems involved in future trade relations between the Philippines and the United States as well as various economic and related adjustments which may be necessitated in connection with the independence program.

"There has been formed a joint committee of American and Philippine experts appointed for the purpose of preparing specific recommendation regarding these matters after careful study. This is not a joint committee of which one side will seek to obtain concessions or favors from the other. All efforts will be directed toward the formulation of a constructive program which will then be referred to the two governments.

"In view of the capacity for self-government and adherence to democratic constitutional principles heretofore demonstrated by the people of the Philippines, all of us hope and expect that they will continue to justify their faith in the principles of liberty and self-government."

Amidst simple but impressive ceremonies, Paul V. McNutt, second American High Commissioner to the Philippines, arrived in Manila at exactly 8:10 o'clock A.M., Monday, April 26, 1937, with Mrs. McNutt, his wife; Miss Louise McNutt, his daughter; and an entourage of 15 other men and women that will form his staff. Manila's high official and social circles composed the cosmopolitan crowd that welcomed him. A nineteen-gun salute was fired in his honor.

Those who met the new High Commissioner were Acting High Commissioner J. Weldon Jones, Rear-Admiral George J. Meyers, Jorge B. Vargas, Secretary to President Quezon, Judge and Mrs. Francisco Delgado, President

Jorge Bocobo of the University of the Philippines, Assemblyman and Mrs. Manuel Alzate, former Associate Justice George C. Malcolm, Leopoldo R. Aguinaldo, J. P. Heilbronn, Mayor Juan Posadas, and a number of other prominent men and women.

Accompanying the High Commissioner, outside of his family, were Wayne Coy, administrative assistant to the High Commissioner, with Mrs. Coy and their son, Steven; Lt.-Colonel William C. Rose, military aide to the Commissioner, and Mrs. Rose; Leo M. Gardner, legal adviser to the Commissioner and Mrs. Gardner and their son, Leo Kellie; Mrs. P. B. Headly, confidential secretary; Mrs. Edith Keyes, assistant clerk; Miss Mary Jo Keene, one of the secretaries; P. W. Reeves, another secretary; and Floyd Dubas, statistician, and Mrs. Dubas.

After placing a wreath on the foot of the Rizal Monument in honor of the Filipino hero and martyr, High Commissioner McNutt proceeded directly to the "El Nido," his temporary residence, where he held a press conference.

Following are the highlights of Commissioner McNutt's press statements:

His program in the Philippines: "I shall proceed on the assumption that independence is set for 1945, until the independence law is altered."

Earlier independence: "There is no proposal in Congress to this effect. It is my impression that a sentiment to this effect does not exist in Congress."

Trade treaty with U. S.: "A treaty is, of course, something which the signatories must respect until repealed. And I believe that there is no impediment to the Philippines, as a Commonwealth, concluding a commercial treaty with America."

His conception of economic independence of the Philippines: "I mean by this a government that can support itself financially and can count with fiscal stability."

Paul H. McNutt

Born in Franklin, Indiana, on July 19, 1891. He is the son of John C. and Ruth (Neely) McNutt. Married the former Miss Kathleen Timolat of San Antonio, Texas, on April 20, 1918, and has one daughter, Louise. He took his bachelor's degree at Indiana University in 1913. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Delta Chi, Order of the Coif, Beta Theta Pi, and Phi Delta Phi. He graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1916. Returning to Indiana, he was appointed assistant professor of law, Indiana University. When America joined the World War, he entered as Captain of volunteers, field artillery. He successively rose in rank until at the end of the war he was a Lieutenant Colonel in the reserve force. He was later active in American Legion work and was president of the American Legion Publishing Corporation from 1928 to 1931. He has been decorated by France with the Legion d'Honneur, and as commander of the "Polonia Restituta" by Poland. A Rotarian, Kiwanis Club member, a 32nd degree Mason, and a Methodist, he plays a fair game of golf. In 1933 he was conferred an LL.D. degree of Notre Dame and Indiana universities. He was elected governor of Indiana on the democratic ticket a year after the 1932 Roosevelt landslide. His term as governor terminated last January 15, 1937. As a former law professor, having served as Dean of the Indiana University School of Law from 1925 to 1933, he had a rich background of theoretical politics before actually entering the political arena. At present, he is High Commissioner to the Philippine Commonwealth.

ANY ERRORS OR OMISSIONS DISCOVERED IN THIS ARMY DIRECTORY SHOULD BE REPORTED PROMPTLY TO THE DEPARTMENT ADJUTANT GENERAL.

ABBREVIATIONS USED WITH TELEPHONE NUMBERS IN THIS DIRECTORY

CY — Manila City Exchange.
 FS — Fort Santiago Exchange.
 McK — Fort William McKinley Exchange.
 NF — Nichols Field Exchange.
 SB — Sternberg Exchange.

CALLS FROM CITY TELEPHONES

To call an Army telephone from a city telephone, dial the number of the appropriate exchange as indicated below, then ask for the local number desired.

Fort Santiago Exchange	dial 2-38-41
Fort William McKinley Exchange	dial 5-69-11
Nichols Field Exchange	dial 5-17-01
Sternberg Exchange	dial 2-39-55
Fort Mills Exchange	dial Fort Santiago number given above, then ask for Fort Mills.

DIRECT ARMY TRUNK LINES

The Army Exchanges have direct trunk lines to other Exchanges as follows.

Fort Santiago Exchange	{	Fort Wm. McKinley Exchange. Nichols Field Exchange. Sternberg Exchange. Fort Mills Exchange. Manila City Exchange.
Fort William McKinley Exchange	{	Fort Santiago Exchange. Nichols Field Exchange. Manila City Exchange.
Nichols Field Exchange	{	Fort Santiago Exchange. Fort Wm. McKinley Exchange. Manila City Exchange.
Sternberg Exchange	{	Fort Santiago Exchange. Manila City Exchange.

USE THE DIRECT LINES WHEN POSSIBLE IN PREFERENCE TO LINES THROUGH THE MANILA CITY EXCHANGE.

IMPROVE YOUR OWN TELEPHONE SERVICE

Complaints that you cannot hear, or that others do not hear you, are possibly due to an improper method of speaking into the transmitter.

Telephone engineers, after exhaustive tests, have found that speaking with the lips one inch from the transmitter has the same effect as adding 75 miles of open wire to the line.

Two inches, 128 miles.
Three inches, 179 miles.
Four inches, 218 miles.

When you use your telephone have your lips so close to the transmitter that they almost touch it. Talk in a normal voice and enunciate distinctly.

Due to extremely severe circuit conditions, telephone conversation between the mainland and the Harbor Defenses is very difficult. Conversation should be slow, distinct and loud.

To call one Army post from another, ask the operator for the post desired by name, not by city telephone number.

In calling an Army telephone, after getting the proper exchange give the telephone number desired, rather than the name of the individual, unless the number cannot be found in the directory.

USE OF FORT SANTIAGO—FORT MILLS TRUNK LINE

The Fort Santiago—Fort Mills telephone circuit will be reserved for official business between 7:00 a. m. and 1:00 p.m., daily, except Sundays and holidays. This trunk line may be used by Army and Navy personnel at other times for personal calls when such use does not retard official business. Personal calls over this trunk line are limited to three minutes each.

Harry E. Yarnell

ADMIRAL HARRY E. YARNELL, U.S. Navy, the Commander in Chief of the United States Asiatic Fleet, was born in Independence, Iowa, on October 18, 1875. In 1893 he was appointed to the United States Naval Academy, from which he graduated in 1897 with the rank of Passed Midshipman. He then served in the U.S.S. OREGON from 1897 to 1899, being on board that ship during the Spanish-American War.

From 1899 to 1902 on the Asiatic Station he served in the U.S.S. ALBANY, the U.S.S. YORKTOWN, and then served on the staff of Admiral George Remey in the BROOKLYN. During the period from 1903 to 1905 he served in the torpedo boats BIDDLE, STOCKTON, BARRY, and DALE, coming to China on the BARRY in 1904 and taking over the command of the DALE during 1905.

Admiral Yarnell then spent a tour of shore duty at the Naval Proving Ground, Indian Head, Maryland. From there he went to the U.S.S. CONNECTICUT for the period from 1908 to 1909, during which time the Fleet made the cruise around the world. During his next shore duty he was Executive Officer at the Naval Torpedo Station, Newport, R.I. Again in 1911 he served in the U.S.S. CONNECTICUT, this time being on the staff of Admiral Hugo Osterhaus. In 1913 he reported to the U.S.S. NEW JERSEY as Navigator. After one year he went to the Naval War College, where he remained during 1914 and 1915.

During 1916 and 1917 he was in command of the U.S.S. NASEVILLE, which vessel was sent to Gibraltar after the United States entered the World War. In 1918 he was on the staff of Admiral Sims in London. For the next two years he served in the Navy Department in Washington.

Returning to sea duty he was with the Destroyer Flotilla at Charleston, S.C., from 1920 to 1922. For the next two years he was in command of the Naval Air Station at Hampton Roads, and from 1924 to 1926 was Commander, Aircraft Squadrons, Scouting Fleet. In 1926 and 1927 he was attached to the staff of the Naval War College. During 1927 and 1928 he was in command of the aircraft carrier SARATOGA.

After his promotion to the rank of Rear Admiral in 1928 he was appointed Chief of the Bureau of Engineering. In 1930 he was a technical adviser at the Disarmament Conference in London. In 1931 he became Commander, Aircraft Battle Force, leaving this post in 1933 to assume duties as Commandant of the Fourteenth Naval District at Pearl Harbor, T.H. On October 30, 1936, Admiral Yarnell assumed command of the United States Asiatic Fleet.

COMMANDER IN CHIEF, U. S. ASIATIC FLEET

Admiral HARRY E. YARNELL, U. S. Navy

George J. Meyers

Rear-Admiral GEORGE J. MEYERS, U. S. N.
Commandant, 16th Naval District

REAR-ADMIRAL GEORGE JULIAN MEYERS was born in Iowa, April 10, 1881. He entered the U.S. Naval Academy on May 23, 1898. He has been awarded the Navy Cross. He is a graduate of the Naval War College, Senior Class, and of the Army War College. Early in Admiral Meyers' career, he completed a post graduate course in Mechanical Engineering and is considered one of the Navy's leading authorities on turbines, having written the text book now in use for the Service. He is the author of other books and articles, including a book on Strategy. Admiral Meyer's last command, prior to duty in the Sixteenth Naval District, was Commander of the EIGHTH Cruiser Division of the United States Fleet. He has also been in Command of the Special Service Squadron. Admiral Meyers first served on the Asiatic Station from 1902 to 1904, being attached to the U.S.S. KENTUCKY and U.S.S. RAINBOW. Admiral Meyers was again on the Asiatic Station during 1906 and 1907 on board the U.S.S. CHATTANOOGA.

U. S. NAVY

ROSTER

UNITED STATES ASIATIC FLEET AND STATION

U. S. S. AUGUSTA, (Flagship)

NOTE

The tour of duty on the Asiatic Station for all Navy Officers is:—

Line officers with the rank of Commander and above, Staff Corps officers and Staff Corps warrant officers is two years—all other officers two and one-half years.

Duty on the Asiatic Station is computed from the time of departure until time of return to the Continental United States.

The date appearing under "Tour Expires," represents month and year the officer will have completed his normal tour of duty on the Asiatic Station.

The tour of duty on the Asiatic Station for Marine officers above the rank of major is two years, and two and one-half years for officers of the rank of major and below, computed from the time of departure until time of return to the Continental United States.

Commanding Officers will check the accuracy of the "Assigned Present Duty" and "Tour Expires" dates as shown herein for all officers under their command and report errors to the Commander-in-Chief. Other errors or omissions should also be reported.

Make report of changes in officers promptly in accordance with Fleet Regulations.

GOVERNMENT OF THE COMMONWEALTH

Government of the Commonwealth.—Directory of Officers and Principal Employees of the Insular Government: The Legislative Department.—The Executive Department.—The Judicial Department.—Provincial and Municipal Officials, Etc.

The Constitution of the Philippines (pp. 329-341),* adopted by the Constitutional Convention at the City of Manila on the eighth day of February, nineteen hundred and thirty-five (pp. 315-321 and 343-345), and signed by the President of the United States on the twenty-third day of March, the same year, (pp. 347-348), in accordance with the provisions of the Tydings-McDuffie Law or Act of Congress of the United States of March 24, 1934 (pp. 302-310), and ratified by the people of the Philippines in a national plebiscite held May 14, 1935 (pp. 349-352), provides among other things that the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall be composed of three distinct and separate powers or departments, namely, (1) the Legislative Department, (2) the Executive Department, and (3) the Judicial Department.

THE LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

The National Assembly.—Section 1 of Article VI of said Constitution provides: "The Legislative power shall be vested in a National Assembly." The National Assembly is a unicameral legislative body that replaced on November 15, 1935, the Philippine Legislature which was composed of two chambers known as the Philippine Senate and the House of Representatives, created by the Jones Law or Act of Congress of August 29, 1916 (pp. 120-132).

Membership in the National Assembly.—The Members of the National Assembly shall not exceed one hundred and twenty, who shall be chosen every three years, and shall be apportioned among the several provinces (Manila included) as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants; but, regardless of the size of population, each province shall have at least one Member. The National Assembly shall by law make an apportionment within three years after the return of every enumeration, and not otherwise. Until such apportionment shall have been made, the National Assembly shall consist of ninety-eight Members, of whom eighty-seven shall be elected by the representative districts as provided by the old Election Law; three by the Mountain Province; and one by each of the other eight existing special provinces,—Nueva Vizcaya (in Luzon), Agusan, Bukidnon, Cotabato, Davao, Lanao and Zamboanga (in Mindanao), and Sulu (archipelago). The Members of the National Assembly in the Provinces of Lanao, Cotabato and Sulu shall be chosen in accordance with the provisions of Section 8 of Act No. 4203 of the tenth Philippine Legislature, approved July 23, 1935 (page 377), which in part read as follows:

"Sec. 8. Election of Members of the National Assembly for Cotabato, Lanao, and Sulu.—The Members of the National Assembly for the Provinces of Cotabato, Lanao, and Sulu shall in each case be elected by the presidents, vice presidents and present municipal councilors of the municipalities and districts making up the province, by the persons who occupied similar positions in said municipalities and municipal districts in the past, and by the present senators, representatives, delegates to the Constitutional Convention, provincial governors and members of provincial boards, and by any persons who occupied any of said offices in the past and reside in the province concerned. * * *

Assembly Districts.—The present districts of the National Assembly are as follows: Abra, 1; Agusan, 1; Albay, 4; Antique, 1; Bataan, 1; Batanes, 1; Batangas, 3; Bohol, 3; Bukidnon, 1; Bulacan, 2; Cagayan, 2; Camarines Norte, 1; Camarines Sur, 2; Capiz, 3; Cavite, 1; Cebu, 7; Cotabato, 1; Ilocos Norte, 2; Ilocos Sur, 2; Iloilo, 5; Isabela, 1; Laguna, 2; Lanao, 1; La Union, 2; Leyte, 5; Manila, 2; Marinduque, 1; Masbate, 1; Mindoro, 1; Misamis Occidental, 1; Misamis Oriental, 1; Mountain Province, 3; Negros Occidental, 3; Negros Oriental, 2; Nueva Ecija, 2; Nueva Vizcaya, 1; Palawan, 1; Pampanga, 2; Pangasinan, 5; Rizal, 2; Romblon, 1; Samar, 3; Sorsogon, 2; Sulu, 1; Surigao, 1; Tarlac, 2; Tayabas, 2; Zambales, 1; and Zamboanga, 1. (See pictures of the Members of the National Assembly at the time of the Commonwealth Inauguration, on pages 446-453, and that of the Speaker, Assemblyman Montilla, on page 445, also p. 474, after the inauguration.)

Qualifications for Membership.—In order that a person may be elected Member of the National Assembly, he* must possess, according to section 2 of Article VI of the Constitution, the following qualifications:

(a) Citizenship: Must be a citizen of the Philippines or naturalized as such for at least five years before his election;

(b) Age: Not less than thirty years of age;

* According to the favorable result of the plebiscite on woman suffrage held on April 30, 1937, the same qualifications must be required of female candidates for membership in the National Assembly.

(c) Qualified Voter: At the time of his election, he must be a qualified elector; and,

(d) Residence: A resident of the province (not necessarily in the district, if the province has more than one district), in which he is chosen, for at least one year immediately prior to his election to said office.

Term of Office.—Members of the National Assembly shall hold office for a term of three years from the date of their election. In case of vacancy in the National Assembly, a special election may be called in the corresponding district, in the manner prescribed by law, but the Member thus elected shall serve only for the unexpired term. Elections for the National Assembly shall be held on the dates fixed by law. Sec. 2 of Act No. 4203, passed by the tenth Philippine Legislature, and approved July 23, 1935, fixed the date of the first commonwealth election on September 17, 1935.

Compensation.—The Members of the National Assembly shall, unless otherwise provide by law, receive an annual compensation of five thousand pesos each, including per diems and other emoluments or allowances and exclusive only of travelling expenses to and from their respective districts when attending sessions of the National Assembly. No increase in said compensation shall take effect until after the expiration of the full term of the Members of the National Assembly elected subsequent to the approval of such increase. The Speaker of the National Assembly shall receive an annual compensation of sixteen thousand pesos until otherwise provided by law. (Sec. 5 of Art. VI of the Constitution.)

Commonwealth Act No. 14, approved December 31, 1935, fixes the salary of the Speaker of the National Assembly at twelve thousand pesos per annum.

Privileges.—The Members of the National Assembly shall, in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the sessions of the National Assembly, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate therein, they shall not be questioned in any other place. (Sec. 6, same Article.)

Officers of the National Assembly.—The National Assembly shall choose its Speaker, a secretary, a sergeant-at-arms, and such other officers as may be required. (Sec. 3, par. (4) of Art. VI, of the Constitution.) The Speaker of the National Assembly enjoys less powers than heretofore enjoyed by the Speaker of the defunct House of Representatives. Commonwealth Resolution No. 10, adopted December 12, 1935, empowers the Secretary of the Assembly to authorize the payment of the expenses of National Assembly.

Quorum.—A majority of all the Members shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent Members, in such manner and under such penalties as the National Assembly may provide. (Sec. 3, par. (4), of same Article.)

Rules.—The National Assembly may determine the rules of its own proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a Member. It shall keep a Journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in its judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays on any question shall, at the request of one-fifth of its Members present, be entered in the Journal. (Sec. 3, par. (5), of same Article.)

Electoral Commission.—There shall be an Electoral Commission composed of three Justices of the Supreme Court designated by the Chief Justice, and of six Members chosen by the National Assembly, three of whom shall be nominated by the party having the largest number of votes, and three by the party having the second largest number of votes therein. The senior Justice in the Commission shall be its chairman. The Electoral Commission shall be the sole judge of all contests relating to the election, returns, and qualifications of the Members of the National Assembly. (Sec. 4, of same Article VI.)

Commissions On Appointments and Impeachment.—The National Assembly shall elect from among its Members, on the basis of proportional representation of the political parties therein, a Commission on Appointments and a Commission on Impeachment, each to consist of twenty-one members. These Commissions shall be constituted within thirty days after the National Assembly shall have been organized with the election of its Speaker, and shall meet only while the National Assembly is in session at the call of their respective Chairmen or a majority of their members, to discharge such powers and functions as are conferred upon them by the Constitution. (Sec. 7 of same Article.)

Restrictions and Prohibitions.—Section 8 of same Article prohibits the Members of the National Assembly from holding any other office or employment in the Government without forfeiting their seats; from entering into any contract with the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof, or in any franchise or special privilege granted by the National Assembly during his term of office; from appearing as counsel before the Electoral Commission or any court in any civil case wherein the Government or any subdivision or instrumentality thereof is the adverse party, or from collecting any fee for his appearance in any administrative proceedings or in any criminal case wherein an officer or employee of the Government is accused of an offense committed in relation to his office. And no Member of the Commission on Appointments shall appear as counsel before any court inferior to the Supreme Court.

Duties and Powers.—The National Assembly may pass any act or resolution, not in conflict with any provision of the Constitution, subject to the limitations therein established respecting the Bill of Rights (Article III of the Constitution), and in accordance with the provisions of Sections 9, 11, 12, 13 and 14, of Article VI, of said Constitution. The National Assembly has the sole power to declare war, and, in times of war or other national emergency, may by law authorize the President, for a limited period and subject to such restrictions as it may prescribe, to promulgate rules and regulations to carry out a declared national policy. (Sections 15 and 16 of same Article.)

Acts affecting currency, coinage, imports, exports, and immigration shall not become law until approved by the President of the United States. (Sec. 1, par. (9), of the Ordinance Appended to the Constitution.)

All acts passed by the National Assembly of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall be reported to the Congress of the United States. (Sec. 1, par. (11) of same Ordinance Appended to the Constitution.)

Amendments.—The National Assembly, by a vote of three-fourths of all its Members, may propose amendments to the Constitution or call a convention for that purpose. (Sec. 1, Art. XIV, of the Constitution.) But every duly approved amendment to the Constitution of the Philippines shall be submitted to the President of the United States for approval. (Sec. 1, par. (18), of the Ordinance Appended to the Constitution.)

THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT

The President and Vice President.—The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the Philippines. (Sec. 1, Art. VII, of the Constitution.) In the event of the removal of the President from office or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the National Assembly shall by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected. (Sec. 9, same Article.)

The mere absence of the incumbent President from the Philippines does not entitle the Vice President to assume office as Acting President of the Philippines.

Elections and Terms of Office.—The President and the Vice President shall be elected by the direct vote of the people and such elections shall be held once every six years on a date to be fixed by the National Assembly (Sec. 5), and their terms of office shall end at noon on the thirtieth day of December following the expiration of six years after their election, and the terms of their successors shall begin from such time (Sec. 6.) No person elected President may be reelected for the following term, nor shall the Vice President or any other person who may have succeeded to the office of President as provided in said Article VII of the Constitution at least one year before the election, be eligible to the office of President at such election.

Qualifications.—No person may be elected to the office of President or to that of Vice President, unless he be a natural-born citizen of the Philippines, a qualified voter, forty years of age or over, and has been a resident of the Philippines for at least ten years immediately prior to his election. (Sec. 3, same Article.)

Compensations.—Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise the President shall receive an annual salary of thirty thousand pesos and shall have an official residence—the Malacañan Palace. The Vice President, when not acting as President, shall receive an annual salary of fifteen thousand pesos until otherwise provided by law. (Sec. 10, same Article.)

Duties and Powers of the President.—The President shall have control of all the executive departments, bureaus, or offices, exercise general supervision over all local governments as may be provided by law, and take care that the laws are faithfully executed. (Sec. 11, Par. (1), of Article VII, of the Constitution.)

Consequently, the President of the Philippines, as Chief Executive of the Country, exercises control and supervision over all the executive departments, namely: (1) The Department of the Interior, (2) the Department of Justice, (3) the Department of Finance, (4) the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, (5) the Department of Public Instruction, (6) the Department of Public Works and Communications, and (7) the Department of Labor. In addition, he has direct control of certain bureaus and offices such as, (a) the Philippine Army, (b) the Domestic Sugar Administration, (c) the General Auditing Office, (d) the Budget Commission, (e) the Census Commission, (f) the Civil Service Commission, and (g) the Government Survey Board.

He has also control of the government-owned corporations, such as, the Manila Railroad Company, the Philippine National Bank, the National Development Company, etc. (Commonwealth Act No. 11, approved December 31, 1935.)

The President of the Philippines also exercises general supervision over all local governments—provincial and municipal, including chartered cities.

The President is the Commander-in-Chief of all armed forces of the Philippines, and, whenever it becomes necessary, he may call out such armed forces to prevent or suppress lawless violence, invasion, insurrection, or rebellion. In case of invasion, insurrection, or rebellion, or imminent danger thereof, when the public safety requires it, he may suspend the privileges of the writ of habeas corpus, or place the Philippines or any part thereof under martial law. (Sec. 11, par. (2), of Art. VII, of the Constitution.)

The President shall nominate and, with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly, shall appoint the heads of the executive departments and bureaus, officers of the Army from the rank of colonel, of the Navy and air forces from the rank of captain or commander, and all other officers of the Government whose appointments are not otherwise provided for in the constitution, and those whom he may be authorized by law to appoint; but the National Assembly may by law vest the appointment of inferior officers, in the President alone, in the courts, or in the heads of departments. (Sec. 11, par. (3), of same Article.)

The President shall have the power to make appointments during the recess of the National Assembly, but such appointments shall be effective only until disapproval by the Commission on Appointments or until the next adjournment of the National Assembly. (Sec. 11, par. (4), of same Article.)

The President shall from time to time give to the National Assembly information of the state of the Nation, and recommend to its consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient. (Sec. 11, par. (5), of said Article.)

The President shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, and remit fines and forfeitures, after conviction, for all offenses, except in cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may deem proper to impose. He shall have the power to grant amnesty with the concurrence of the National Assembly. (Sec. 11, par. (6), of same Article.)

The President shall have the power, with the concurrence of a majority of all the Members of the National Assembly, to make treaties, and with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly, he shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls. He shall receive ambassadors and other ministers duly accredited to the Government of the Philippines. (Sec. 11, par. (7), of same Article.)

The President may appoint the Vice President as a member of his cabinet and also as head of an executive department. (Sec. 12, par. (3) of Art. VII, of the Constitution.)

Annual Report.—The President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines shall make an annual report to the President and Congress of the United States of the proceedings and operations of the Government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines and shall make such other reports as the President or Congress may request. (Sec. 1, paragraph (20), of the Ordinance Appended to the Constitution.)

THE JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT

The Supreme Court.—Section 1 of Article VIII of the Constitution provides: "The Judicial power shall be vested in one Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as may be established by law." Commonwealth Act No. 5, approved December 31, 1935, amends certain provisions of the Revised Administrative Code on the Judiciary, by reducing the number of Justices of the Supreme Court and creating the Court of Appeals and defining their respective jurisdictions.

Jurisdiction.—Section 2 of same Article of the Constitution empowers the National Assembly to enact laws defining, prescribing, and apportioning the jurisdiction of the various courts, but no law may deprive the Supreme Court of its original jurisdiction over cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, nor of its jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm on appeal, certiorari, or writ of error, as the law or the rules of court may provide, final judgments and decrees of inferior courts in—

(1) All cases in which the constitutionality or validity of any treaty, law, ordinance, or executive order or regulation is in question.

(2) All cases involving the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, or toll, or any penalty imposed in relation thereto.

(3) All cases in which the jurisdiction of any trial court is in issue.

(4) All criminal cases in which the penalty is death or life imprisonment.

(5) All cases in which an error or question of law is involved.

Section 3 of the same Article recognizes such original and appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court as was possessed and exercised by it at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. Such original jurisdiction of said Court includes all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls.

Appointment.—The members of the Supreme Court and all judges of inferior courts are appointed by the President with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly. (Sec. 5, Art. VIII.)

Qualifications.—In order that a person may be appointed a member of the Supreme Court he or she must possess the following qualifications, viz.: (a) A citizen of the Philippines for at least five years, (b) forty years of age or over, (c) for ten years or more has been a judge of a court of record, or (d) engaged in the practice of law in the Philippines for such a length of time. (Sec. 6, id.)

The qualifications required of judges of inferior courts shall be prescribed by the National Assembly (Commonwealth Act No. 3), but no person may be appointed judge of any such courts unless (a) he or she is a citizen of the Philippines, and (b) has been admitted to the practice of law in the Islands. (Sec. 8, id.)

Term of Office and Compensation.—The members of the Supreme Court and all judges of inferior courts shall hold office during good behavior, until they reach the age of seventy years, or become incapacitated to discharge the duties of their office. They shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by law, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office. Until the National Assembly shall provide otherwise, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall receive an annual compensation of sixteen thousand pesos, and each Associate Justice, fifteen thousand pesos. (Sec. 9, id.)

Transfer and Residence of Judges.—No Judge appointed for a particular district shall be designated or transferred to another district without the approval of the Supreme Court. The National Assembly shall by law determine the residence of judges. (Sec. 7, id.)

Rules of Court.—The Supreme Court shall have the power to promulgate rules concerning pleading, practice, and procedure in all courts, and the admission of candidates to the practice of law in the Philippines. Said rules shall be uniform for all courts of the same grade and shall not diminish, increase, or modify substantive rights. Section 13 of Article VIII of the Constitution also provides that the existing laws on pleading, practice, and procedure are thereby repealed as statutes, and are declared Rules of Courts, subject to the power of the Supreme Court to alter and modify the same. It further provides that the National Assembly shall have the power to repeal, alter, or supplement the rules concerning pleading, practice, and procedure, and the admission of candidates to the practice of law in the Philippines.

PROVINCIAL AND MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENTS INCLUDING CHARTERED CITIES

Come under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior, but for the sake of convenience we found it necessary to publish the information concerning provinces, municipalities and chartered cities under a separate section immediately following the Insular Government—Judicial Department.

Manila, being the Capital of the Philippines, precedes the Provinces and Municipalities.

HEAD OF STATE POLICE

Hon. LEON G. GUINTO
Commissioner of Public Safety

Commonwealth Act No. 88, approved October 26, 1936, provides for the organization and maintenance of a State Police Force for the proper enforcement of law and order throughout the Philippines. This organization comes under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior. The Commissioner of Public Safety has the rank and salary of an Undersecretary of Department and is appointed by the President, with the consent of the Commission on Appointments of the National Assembly. He is the Chief Executive Officer of the Police organization and of all Fire Departments. There are three Assistant Commissioners of Public Safety.

The City of Manila

THIS modern metropolis with a population of over 400,000 has a picturesque and fascinating past inseparably associated with the history of the Philippines.

The great adventurer, Ferdinand Magellan, discovered the Islands in 1521, but it was not until 1565 that the Spanish made the first permanent settlement on the island of Cebu. In 1570 they occupied Manila and made it their capital.

In the 16th century the region now occupied by the City of Manila came under the control of Mohammedan invaders from Mindanao and Borneo. When first visited by Europeans in 1550 it was the site of two towns, each ruled by a petty Rajah. The town north of the river was called Tondo and that to the south was called then as now "Maynila," or "Intramuros."

In 1590 the building of the fortification around the Spanish settlement (the present Walled City) was begun and by the end of the first quarter of the 17th century Manila had a university, hospital, many churches, printing presses and other expressions of western civilization.

The commercial growth of the city was hampered by the Dutch wars, troubles with Chinese and restrictions imposed by the Spanish. In 1762, during the Seven Years War in Europe, Manila was occupied by the British and held for two years. It was restored to Spain in 1763 by the treaty of Paris.

The third occupation came in 1898 when United States troops landed at Fort San Antonio Abad, just south of the City, after the destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila Bay.

Pier 7, Manila, Philippines

Manila today is one of the healthiest, most cosmopolitan and interesting of the larger ports of the world.

It is the capital and largest city of the Philippine Islands and is situated on the west central coast of Luzon, the largest Island in the Archipelago. It is on the eastern and inner shore of Manila Bay, a great indentation in the coast about 100 miles in circumference. Its latitude is 14°36' north of the Equator.

It lies at the north of the Pasig River directly opposite of which is the strongly fortified island of Corregidor which guards the harbor, about thirty miles from the city.

Manila is surprising in appearance to the newcomer after the mountain scenery of Hongkong. It is built on low flat land bisected by the river and cut by numerous esteros or canals. The mountains from 3000 to 5000 feet in height are visible in the purple distance on the land side, with Mariveles a towering peak just across the bay.

Manila is one of the world's great seaports, the trade center of the Orient and its new $7,000,000.00 pier is not excelled anywhere in size or facilities.

With a view to furnishing the students with an adequate information concerning schools and colleges established in the Philippines that they may properly select the courses which will best suit their personal convenience, we have endeavored to publish herein an Educational Directory, giving an alphabetical list of schools, colleges and universities in Manila and provinces, with their respective officers, members of the faculty and their addresses, and a list of the courses they operate under government approval as of January 1, 1937, and their location by provinces. This directory may also be of help to book and stationery dealers and agents, printers and publishers, writers, photographers, businessmen and others, who may desire to have contact with the officers, instructors or teachers, and students of such institutions.

In the interest of health and sanitation, we have published in this part of the book as complete a list as possible of all physicians and hospitals in the Philippine Islands, giving their brief biographical data and addresses which we have compiled from the Philippine Medical Directory, published by the Philippine Islands Medical Association, and from the Board of Medical Examiners and other available sources of information. This directory will no doubt be of much use to the public, in general, and to the druggists and merchants, in particular.

Publicity managers and ad writers will no doubt find it useful to have a list of newspapers and other publications, entered as second-class mail matter in the Bureau of Posts, for oftentimes they may need to send news items or advertisements which are essential in the propaganda of their businesses or products. Mail service during these days plays an important part in the conduct of national and local affairs, and newspaper is a medium of communication and exchange which is indispensable to human progress.

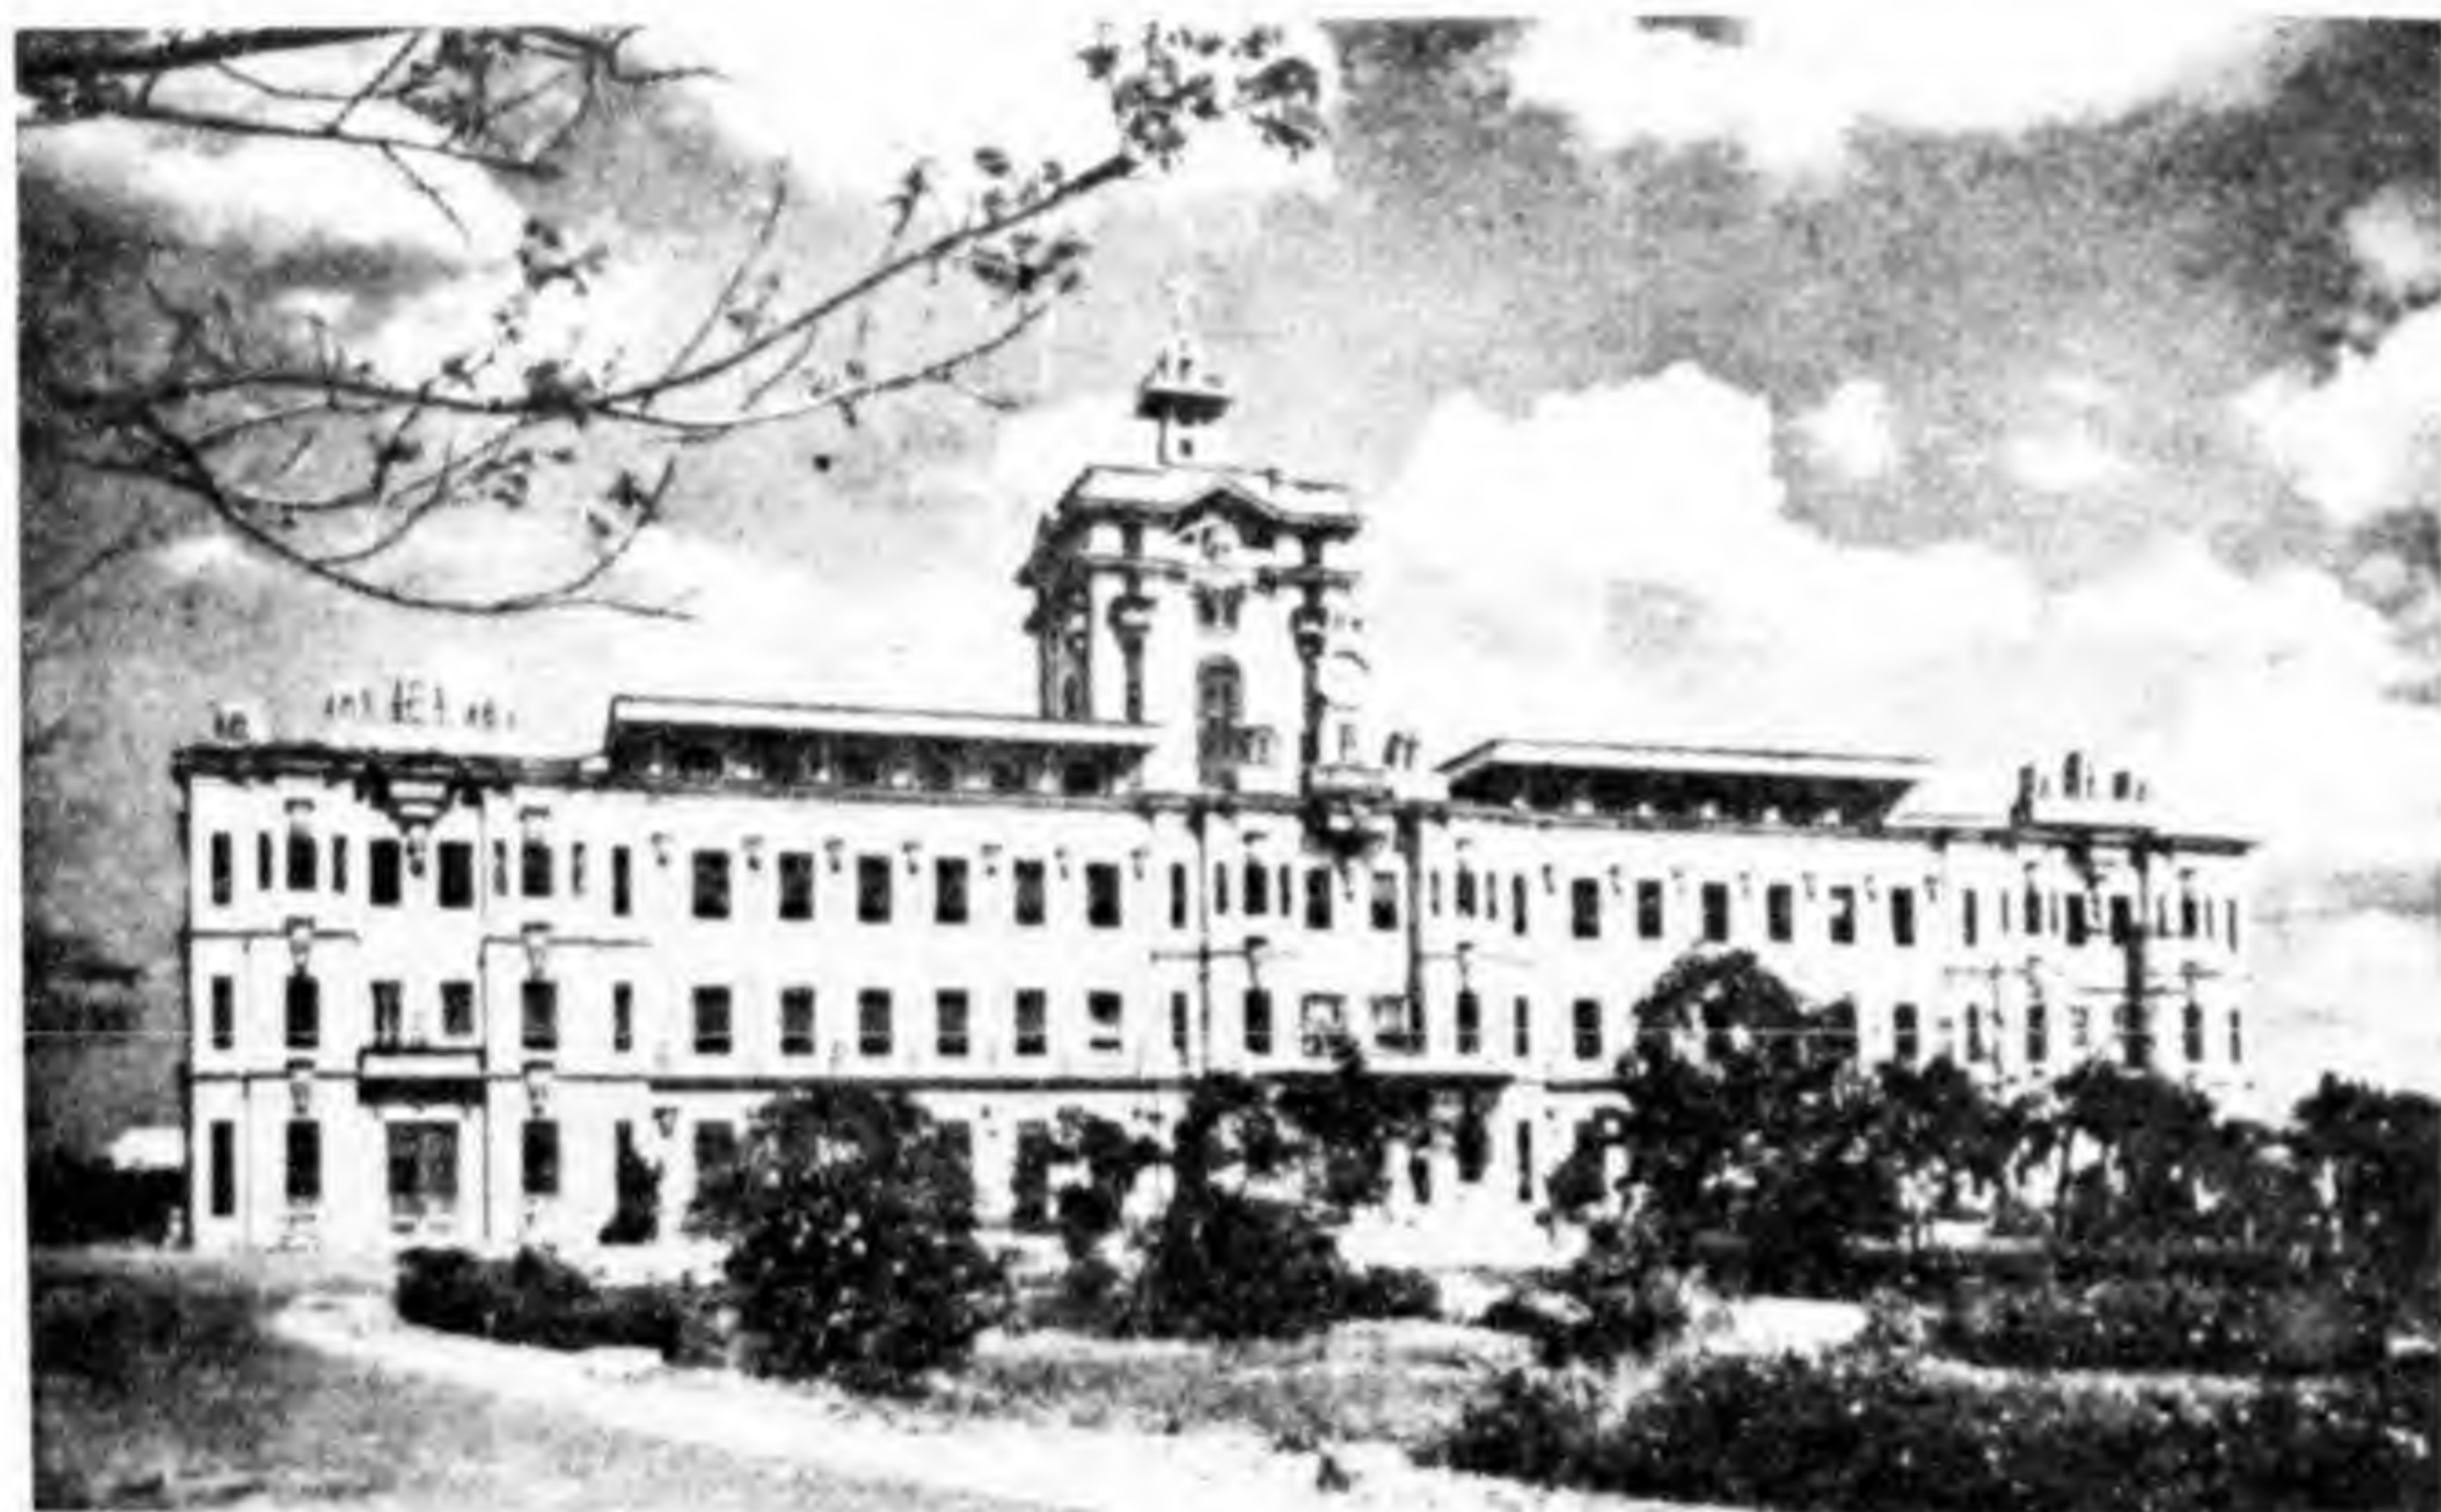

We have also published herein an alphabetical list of mining concerns which mining locators, prospectors, engineers, geologists, chemists, surveyors, technicians, promoters and investors may need for reference purposes.

Lastly, we have published herein a Classified List of Business Firms, and a List of Importers and Exporters which producers and consumers, manufacturers and agents, merchants and traders, sellers and buyers, and others, may also need from time to time. The Alphabetical List of Business Firms in Manila and Provinces is a general guide that will be of great use to the business and professional men, here and abroad.

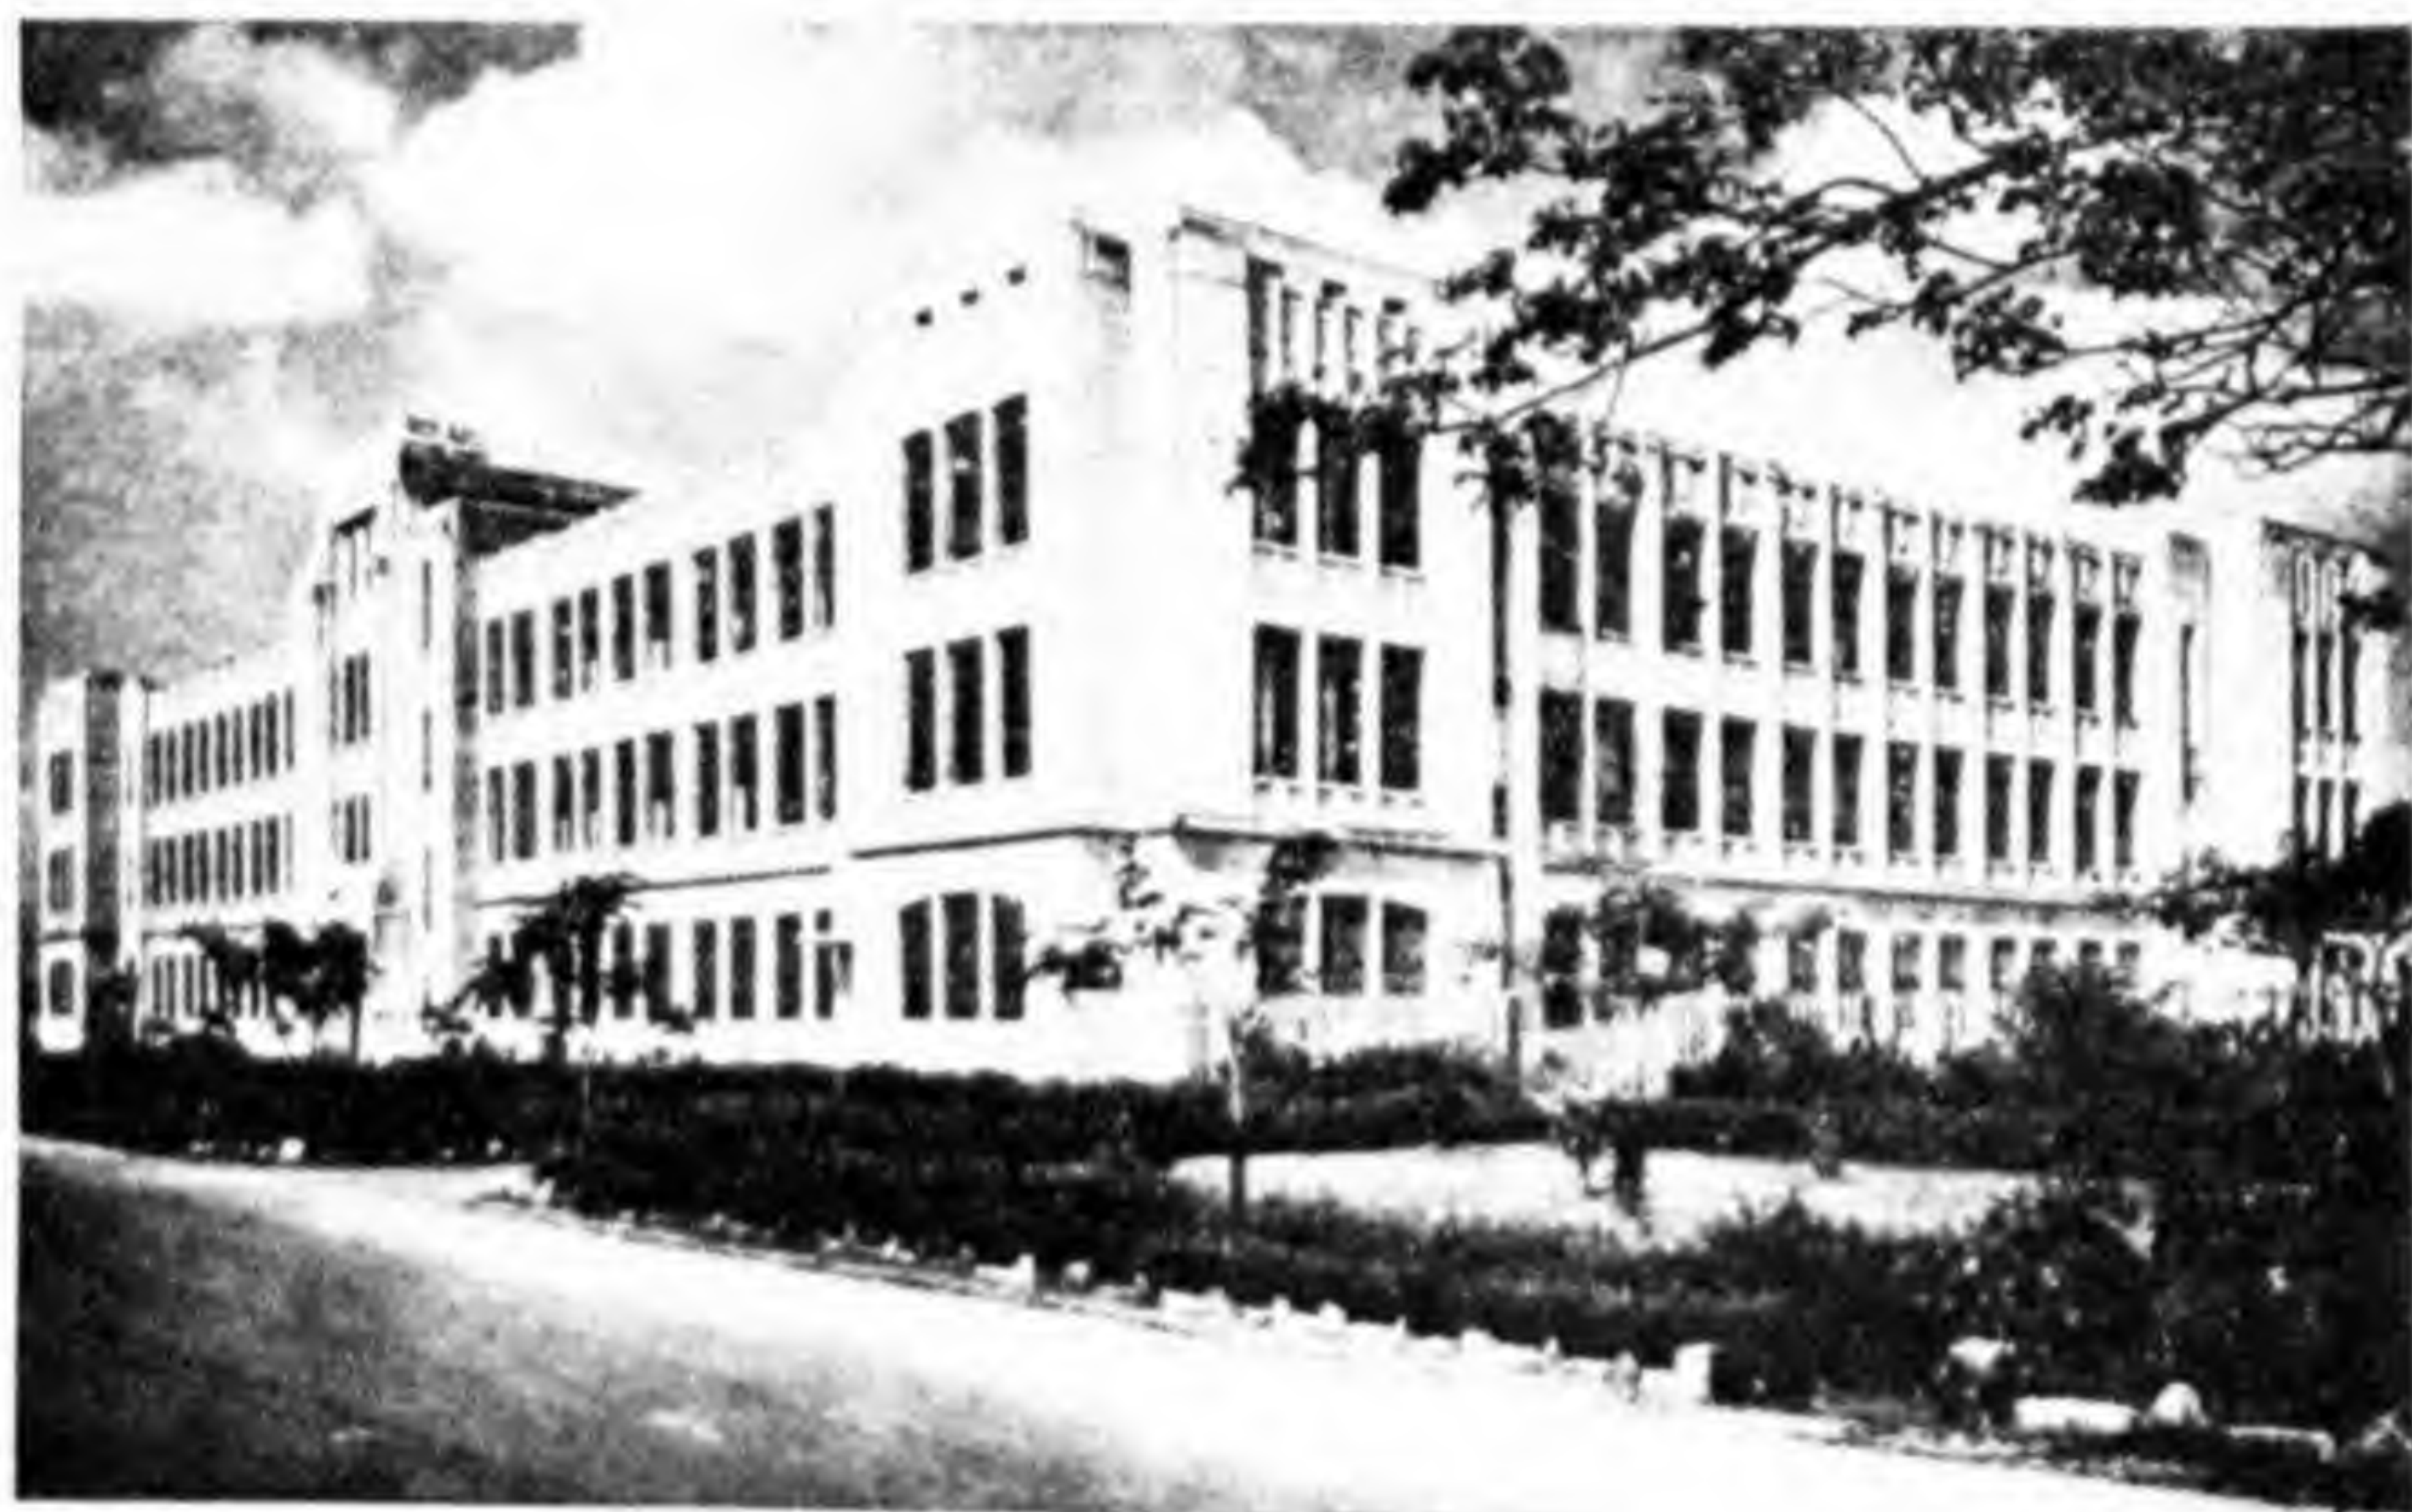

As changes in personnel and addresses are taking place in the different offices of the Government and private concerns unavoidably so often, we will appreciate it very much if our readers or subscribers will kindly bring to our attention any error, omission or change they may find in this directory in order that we may correct same in our next issue.

EDUCATIONAL DIRECTORY

PUBLIC SCHOOLS IN THE PHILIPPINES

The public schools in the Philippines are directly under the supervision and control of the Bureau of Education. This bureau has appointed a division superintendent for each province. Excluding the city of Manila there are thirty-nine provinces throughout the Philippine Archipelago. Each division superintendent is the head of all the primary, intermediate or elementary, and high schools established within the province to which he is assigned by the Director of Education. Each province has at least one high school headed by the Principal. The City of Manila has four high schools which are under the Department of City Schools headed by one Superintendent and one Assistant Superintendent. There are other secondary, special and vocational schools operating under the Bureau of Education.

According to the report of the Acting Director of Education for the school year 1936-37, there were 6,541 primary schools, 1,039 intermediate schools, 113 secondary and special schools, and 6 junior colleges, or a total of 7,928 public schools, to which 1,262,353 children were admitted. There were 28,485 public school teachers who were assigned to the different schools. The total appropriation for 1936 academic year was P14,596,850.00. Of this amount P3,698,148.05 was spent for salaries and wages, P559,526.00 for sundry expenses, P11,466.00 for furniture and equipment, P19,397,715.15 for special appropriation, P137,773.83 for forced saving, P88,685.08 for reserve, and P21,487.22 was transferred to the Budget Commission. Yet more than one million children of school age were not given accommodation in the public schools. The above mentioned appropriation did not include the local school budget for each town or municipality, which had to maintain its classes at the expense of the local government concerned.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS

The private schools operating under the approval of the Government of the Commonwealth follow the same system of education adopted by the public schools. These private schools are under the direct control and supervision of the Office of Private Education. There are special schools for adult citizens, which schools are under the supervision of the Office of Adult Education.

All public schools, except the University of the Philippines, and all private institutions of learning duly recognized by the Government are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Instruction. The Vice President of the Philippines, Hon. Sergio Osmeña, is the head of this Department.

For the convenience of our readers we have endeavored to publish herein: (a) An alphabetical list of private schools, colleges and universities, including the University of the Philippines, and the officers of administration and members of the various faculties; and, (b) A complete list of courses operating under Government approval, arranged alphabetically by provinces and municipalities where they are established or located.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The Colegio de San Juan de Letran was established in the year 1630 and entrusted to the guidance of the Spanish Dominican Fathers who uninterruptedly have managed and conducted it ever since.

Highly recommended by the King of Spain and ennobled with the title of "REAL" by His Catholic Majesty, the Colegio de San Juan de Letran was very soon in the limelight and became the one leading secondary institution for the education of the Filipino Youth.

For over three hundred years the Colegio de San Juan de Letran has never ceased to form staunch Catholics and spirited citizens. And the list of those who with their exceptional talents and spirit of fortitude have brought honor to the country is as long as the life of this tri-centenarian institution has been.

It is the avowed purpose of this college to adapt itself to the constant progress of culture and fully meet the ever increasing demand for a thorough Christian education of the youth. Hence, its ever up-to-date curriculum and unsurpassed educational facilities.

The Colegio de San Juan de Letran has a glorious and unparalleled tradition to maintain; over three hundred years of unselfish and fruitful labor San Juan de Letran justly looks back with pride, and in the inspiration of their achievement it gathers strength to increase its efficiency and look forward to a future of still greater service.

That same College, under the very same management and with the last improvements and conveniences that a complete, sound, and Catholic education may afford, presents itself anew to the public and pledges to do its very best for the proper religious and civic education of the youth of the land.

COLEGIO DE SAN JUAN DE LETRAN

The Colegio de San Juan de Letran is at present located in the Walled City (Intramuros) occupying the whole block formed by Letran, Muralla, Anda, and Beaterio streets. It is indeed one of the most healthy and central locations in Manila, facing Plaza Lawton and the Botanical Gardens.

Its building is spacious and well ventilated, with fully equipped classrooms and laboratories and two inner gardens and two inner courts for play and recreation. Adjoining the College are also the municipal grounds, giving ample facilities for all kinds of sports as well as for reglamentary military drill.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The whole history of the National University is inseparably linked with the life of the founder and builder of the institution, the late Comptroller Mariano F. Jhocson. Just after the establishment of the Civil Government in the Philippines, Comptroller Jhocson established and organized in the district of Santa Cruz, City of Manila, a small school, the Colegio Filipino. It began with barely a score of students who were enrolled in the elementary and secondary courses. Five years later, the little school underwent a minor change in name. What was formerly called the Colegio Filipino became known as the Colegio Mercantil. The change of name was made necessary because of the modification of the school curriculum. From the general elementary and secondary instruction which it offered during the first five years of its existence it was changed to the training of young men in commerce, bookkeeping, and accounting. After two years, however, the Colegio Mercantil again gave primary and secondary courses, besides bookkeeping, accounting, and commerce, the plan of which was based on the traditional system which prevailed during the Spanish regime. The subsequent liberal movement of thought among the Filipinos brought many changes in the curricula and discipline of the college. From 1911 to 1913, though the medium of instruction was Spanish, the course of study was similar to that given in the public schools in the Philippines.

In 1913 this college again underwent a radical change both in instruction and method. The instruction which was given in Spanish was supplanted by English, and the method became more modern. Ever since then, the school has given its instruction in the English language. It was one of the first private schools in the Philippines organized and incorporated under Act 1459 (The Corporation Law) that was authorized to confer diplomas on its graduates.

With the passing of the years came progressive evolution in the method of instruction in the school—the acquisition of qualified teachers, and the establishment of suitable buildings provided with up-to-date equipment and facilities. The College did not only undergo changes in its internal organization but also in name as on August 1, 1916, the Board of Trustees, after due deliberation, changed the title Colegio Mercantil to National Academy. Then came more improvements and expansion.

The Philippine Law School was founded, incorporated, and opened to students in June, 1915, by Comptroller Jhocson and the Lacson brothers as an answer to the demand of the increasing number of high school graduates for an evening English law school. On February 7, 1916, nine months after its opening, the college was accredited by the Government and in 1921 became the College of Law of the University. Its early work was conducted with the advice and assistance of five members of the Manila Bar. As it was organized to meet the growing demand for a strictly technical school furnishing the highest grade of instruction in legal matters, it had outgrown its quarters after the first year in such a way that it had to be transferred to its present location, specially arranged and equipped to meet the requirements of a modern law school.

Hardly a year elapsed when a greater need for further expansion was felt, the establishment of a course in liberal arts and in education, and the Board of Trustees, always conscious of its duty to meet a public demand, decided to establish the collegiate department of the National Academy on April 15, 1917. This department was accredited by the Department of Public Instruction on February 15, 1918, and became the College of Liberal Arts of the University.

The most important aims of this college are to prepare students for professional courses and to provide a place of instruction for general culture and higher liberal arts education essential to efficient citizenship and leadership in the community. The degree of Bachelor of Arts (A.B.) was conferred to students on the completion of two years of specified work, but in order to place this college upon the rank of United States universities, two courses are offered, one leading to the title of Associate in Arts (A.A.) based on the completion of two years' work, and the other leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts (A.B.) based on the completion of four years' work.

After the foundation had thus been laid, and the policy of including within it a group of more technical and professional colleges had been determined, the Trustees, on January 17, 1921, reincorporated the National Academy and had its name changed to National University. The new institution began work as such in June of the same year.

With the first set of graduates from the collegiate departments of the National Academy came requests from more students for the college to offer a higher course of instruction and the Trustees, consistent with their policy of expansion, organized the College of Education in July, 1921. It offers thorough courses in education as well as in other subjects related to education. It has for its aims the training of more efficient teachers and to serve the needs of the Philippine schools for more professionally trained supervisory and administrative officers. This college was accredited by the Government on January 3, 1923.

Simultaneously with the opening of the College of Education, the College of Commerce and Business Administration was founded and accredited by the Government in the same year that its sister college was accredited. This college has for its purpose to help in the realization of the full development of the economic life of the country by helping equip an adequate body of Filipinos with the fundamentals of business and with a clear understanding of the laws and forces governing commercial activities and the proper administration of mercantile organizations.

Aside from the colleges and departments of the University above mentioned, the College of Pharmacy was established on July 8, 1922, and was accredited by the Government on March 19, 1924. Subsequently the College of Dentistry and the Conservatory of Music were organized. The former was recognized by the Secretary of Public Instruction on November 20, 1924. A branch of the High School and Liberal Arts was established in Intramuros. The College of Engineering was opened in June, 1925. To these may also be added the opening of a Commercial High School, a Four-Year Normal Course, and courses in surveying, bookkeeping and stenography. These new courses have recently been authorized by the Department of Public Instruction.

Perhaps one of the most important departments of the University that may be specially mentioned in this sketch was the Department of Military Science and Tactics. The University authorities, realizing from their experience the value and importance of military training, applied to the United States government for the establishment of a military department in which systematic instruction for R.O.T.C. may be given. The request was granted on October 1, 1923, and immediately two regular army officers were detailed to organize and establish the department. Equipment, such as the United States Springfield rifles, bayonets, belts, etc., were accordingly supplied, and the Department began to give instruction along the same lines that lead to commission in the United States Reserve Corps. This privilege has placed the University on the same standard as those of modern State Universities and won for this institution a distinction unique among the private universities in the Islands.

However, upon request of the President with the concurrence of the Cabinet of the National University, the government aid to this department was withdrawn on January 1, 1927, leading to the closing of the Department of Military Science and Tactics and the subsequent organization of the Department of Physical Education.

A new addition to the University schools and colleges is the Junior Normal College which has practically the same curriculum as that of the Philippine Normal School. It was opened under permit of the Department of Public Instruction on June 9, 1930, and was recognized by the government on February 3, 1932. It offers a collegiate course leading to the Elementary Teacher's Certificate (E.T.C.). Its objectives are: (1) to train prospective teachers in the professional work of teaching; (2) to give teachers in the service such knowledge of principles and methods as will improve their efficiency in the work of education; (3) to give the students the necessary information and training for intelligent participation in matters of private and public education; and (4) to provide the students with instruction and training in elementary education which will make them more fully prepared for teaching administrative and supervisory work after they finish their course in the Senior Normal College (College of Education).

The schools and colleges of the University are housed in separate buildings, the group of five houses in Lipa and San Anton Streets, District of Sampaloc, composing the central or main buildings. Pupils and students of elementary and secondary schools, those of the Junior Normal College, College of Liberal Arts, Education, Pharmacy, Dentistry, Commerce and Business Administration, and Engineering are all housed in the main buildings on Lipa Street. The College of Law (Philippine Law School) holds its classes in two buildings located on Calle Anda and General Luna in the Walled City and the Intramuros

Unit of the College of Liberal Arts and the High School on General Luna Street.

Thus came into existence this institution of learning in the Philippines which is unique in the sense that it is the first private highest educational institution and which is exclusively under the control and management of a purely Filipino Board of Trustees.

THE UNIVERSITY OF STO. TOMAS

HISTORICAL SKETCH

The University of Santo Tomas is an outgrowth of the early educational labors inaugurated by the Dominican Order, shortly after the arrival of its first missionaries in the Philippine Islands in 1587. From humble and informal beginnings, characteristic of pioneer days, the work was carried on to a degree of organized efficiency adapted to the particular needs of the new province and kept in pace with the latest scientific discoveries, thus accomplishing the traditions of the Order.

With the first foreshadowing of an institution to be modeled after the great Universities of Spain, the name of the third Archbishop of Manila the Most Rev. Miguel de Benavides, O. P. (d. 1605) is lastingly associated. In a bequest consisting of his library and goods valued at 1,500 pesos, he gave the nucleus of a fund towards an enterprise, the primary aim of which was the formation of a body of men specially fitted to promote the Christianization and education of the native inhabitants of the Archipelago.

The executor of the last will and testament of Archbishop Benavides was Father Bernardo de Santa Catalina, O.P., his intimate friend and associate. He was speedily commissioned by his superiors to carry out the wishes of the deceased prelate. In the same year of the Archbishop's death, the first building was secured. It occupied a portion of the old site of Santo Tomas in Intramuros. The formal foundation was completed in the year 1611, under the name of the College of Our Lady of the Rosary; but five years later, that name was changed to "College of Santo Tomas."

In the meantime, other unconditioned benefactors helped to improve the original foundation and broadened its scope. Among the most noteworthy gifts and legacies were a library and 3,800 pesos from Bishop Diego de Soria, O.P., of the diocese of Lal-lo (Cagayan) and several timely donations from the Rt. Rev. Domingo González, O. P., Bishop of Nueva Cáceres. These with several other donations by secular benefactors, opened the way to a new era of the College's development.

Royal confirmation of the authority granted to the College by the Governor of the Islands and Diocesan Ordinary was obtained from Philip IV on November 27, 1623. His letter commends the work of the Institution as resulting "in great advantage to the youth, to the preaching of the Gospel and to the education of the sons of the inhabitants." The trained and zealous men doing such work were naturally bent on a policy of further improvement. They aimed to attain the status of a university, with all of its powers, royal and pontifical, and they lost no time in petitioning the King to grant them authority and privileges to that effect.

A brief had been issued by Pope Paul V in 1619, empowering Dominican Colleges outside of Mexico and Lima, which the Order had also founded, to confer university degrees for a term of ten years. On August 28, 1624, the Royal Council of the Indies recommended that the provisions of this brief should be extended to the provinces of Chile, New Granada and the Philippine Islands. The recommendation was adopted by a royal decree, dated September 6, 1624. The Papal document granted the privilege of graduating students, after five years of study, and after the customary academic acts, theses, and formalities, as bachelors, licentiates, masters and doctors, according to their respective courses and merits.

Another brief, confirming the preceding grant and giving it validity for another ten years, was issued by Pope Urban VIII in 1672. It was given effects, as before, by recommendation of the Royal Council of the Indies, Feb. 17, 1629. On this basis, the Manila educational establishment continued its work for nearly two decades.

In 1644, Philip IV, through his ambassador at Rome, petitioned the Holy See to erect the College of Santo Tomas into a University endowed with the same authority and perpetuity enjoyed by the Dominican Universities of Avila and Pamplona in Spain, and of Lima and Mexico in the New World. The following year His Holiness, Pope Innocent X, granted the royal petition in a brief, signed in Rome, Nov. 20th, 1645.

In 1680 the Dominicans petitioned the King (Charles II) to favor the institution with his royal patronage and protection. This was to add dignity to the University as well as to increase its efficiency and moral influence. The petition was granted in a royal decree, May 17 of the same year, and the royal document made special mention of the degrees in Theology and Arts as being conferred only after rigorous examinations and with commendable results.

On the advent of Philip V of the House of Bourbon to the Spanish throne, a new impetus was given to educational work throughout Spain and her possessions. At Santo Tomas a notable addition to the Faculties was made in the latter part of his reign, where two new colleges, those of Canon Law and of Civil Jurisprudence, were established. The Papal confirmation of their establishment was obtained from Pope Clement XII, on September 4, 1734. The two courses covered the entire curriculum of Jurisprudence according to the prevailing standard at the time.

Through the Dominicans had planned a Faculty of Medicine as early as 1682, the opening of the Departments of Medicine and Pharmacy took place only in 1871. A School for Midwives was added as a special department in 1879. In the year 1904, a School of Dentistry was established under the Faculty of Medicine.

In the year 1907, the Faculty of Civil Engineering was inaugurated.

In the school-year 1923-1924, the College of Liberal Arts was inaugurated with the establishment of the Preparatory Law Course. In the following academic year, 1924-1925, the Pre-Medical Course was opened for High School graduates desiring to pursue their studies in the Faculty of Medicine and Surgery. Both of these preparatory courses lead to the title of Associate in Arts.

Two more courses, leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science, were established in June, 1926.

In June, 1926, the College of Education was founded for the training of teachers upon Catholic principles.

A department of Architecture, now the School of Architecture and Fine Arts, was established by the University in June, 1930, under the Faculty of Engineering.

A four-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Chemistry was opened in June, 1931.

In June, 1933, the University opened its School of Commerce under the College of Education.

In the summer session of 1933 a graduate course leading to Master of Science in Mathematics was opened under the College of Liberal Arts. In the same College a four-year course, probably the first of its kind in these Islands, leading to Bachelor of Science in Chemical Engineering was offered at the start of the 1934-35 academic year. The same year the University also began to offer the four-year Bachelor of Science in Mining Engineering course in its Faculty of Civil Engineering. The Faculty of Philosophy and Letters offers a four-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Literature in Journalism and a two-year post-graduate course leading to the degree of Master of Arts in English.

The University of Santo Tomas is an institution which, from the beginning, has been almost exclusively the work of the Philippine Province of the Dominican Order. This University is accomplishing its work out of its own resources and with substantial support of the Dominican Province of the Holy Rosary in the Philippine Islands. It has striven during all its career, under the direct authority and sanction of the Holy See, to be true to its calling and, under Providence, it has been singularly blessed and has prospered in realizing its aim.

Pope Leo XIII, of happy memory, in his Constitution Quae mari Sinico of September 17, 1902, after making great eulogies to the Dominican University of Manila, adds: "Wherefore, fully confirming the honors and privileges granted thereto by the Roman Pontiffs Innocentius X, Innocentius XI, and Clementius XII, we endow it with the title of Pontifical University, and it is our will that the academic degrees therein conferred have the same value as those obtained in other Pontifical Universities."

His Holiness, Pope Pius X, not only confirmed the privileges granted by his predecessors, but increased them, as on April 4, 1906, he granted to the Faculty for Clergymen the character of a real Seminary, and gave the University the exclusive power to confer academic degrees.

The University of Santo Tomas has always enjoyed an official standing not only in the Church, but also in the Spanish Government, for the latter recognized the degrees and diplomas conferred by it, both in Civil and Ecclesiastical Faculties, as those obtained in any other State University.

The Philippine Government, and now the Commonwealth of the Philippines, by whom the University of Santo Tomas is regarded as a recognized corporation, does not grant without previous examination, official validity to degrees issued by it. Under the principle of neutrality by which the American State is governed, it cannot do otherwise. The University of Santo Tomas is indebted to the Government of the Philippine Islands and now to the Commonwealth of the Philippines for many proofs of kind consideration and support, as the extension of its official recognition to the Faculties of Civil Law, Philosophy and Letters, Medicine and Surgery, Pharmacy, Engineering, the College of Liberal Arts, the College of Education, the School of Architecture and Fine Arts, the School of Commerce and the High School Department.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PHILIPPINES

GOVERNMENT AND HISTORY OF THE UNIVERSITY

THE UNIVERSITY CHARTER

AN ACT FOR THE PURPOSE OF FOUNDING A UNIVERSITY FOR THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, GIVING IT CORPORATE EXISTENCE, PROVIDING FOR A BOARD OF REGENTS, DEFINING THE BOARD'S RESPONSIBILITIES AND DUTIES, PROVIDING HIGHER AND PROFESSIONAL INSTRUCTION, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES. (ACT No. 1870, AMENDED BY ACT No. 2024, ENACTED JANUARY 30, 1911; ACT No. 2483, ENACTED FEBRUARY 5, 1915; ACT No. 2759, ENACTED FEBRUARY 23, 1918; ACT No. 3197, ENACTED DECEMBER 2, 1924; ACT 3745, ENACTED NOVEMBER 24, 1930; AND ACT No. 4044, ENACTED FEBRUARY 18, 1933.)

By authority of the United States, be it enacted by the Philippine Legislature, that:

SECTION 1. The Governor-General is hereby authorized, within the powers and limitations hereinafter specified, to establish in the City of Manila, or at the point he may deem most convenient, a university which shall be known by the designation of "University of the Philippines," the same being organized as a corporation under that name.

PURPOSE OF THE UNIVERSITY

SEC. 2. The purpose of said University shall be to provide advanced instruction in literature, philosophy, the sciences, and arts, and to give professional and technical training.

SEC. 3. No student shall be denied admission to the University by reason of age, sex, nationality, religious belief, or political affiliation.

BOARD OF REGENTS: (a) ITS COMPOSITION

SEC. 4. The government of said University is hereby vested in a board of regents to be known as the "Board of Regents of the University of the Philippines." The Board of Regents shall be comprised of the Secretary of Public Instruction, who shall be ex-officio chairman of the Board; the chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction of the Senate; the chairman of the Committee on Public Instruction of the House of Representatives; the President of the University; the Director of Education; two alumni of the University of the Philippines, elected by the Alumni Association of the University under such rules and regulations as may be adopted by the Association and approved by the Board of Regents; and four additional members to be appointed by the Governor-General,* by and with the consent of the Philippine Senate. The President of the University shall be elected and his compensation shall be fixed by the Board of Regents. The members appointed by the Governor-General and those elected by the Alumni Association of the University shall hold office for a term of three years or until their successors are

*New, National Assembly's majority floor leader and chairman of the Committee on public instruction.

 Now, President of the Philippines elected or appointed. In case of a vacancy among the members of the Board of Regents appointed by the Governor-General, such vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the Governor-General by and with the consent of the Philippine Senate, and such appointee shall hold office for the unexpired term. All members of the Board of Regents shall be residents of the Philippine Islands. No person in the employ of the University in any capacity whatsoever, whether as dean, professor, instructor, lecturer, or otherwise, shall be eligible to membership on the Board, whether by appointment by the Governor-General or by election of the alumni: Provided, however, That any person now holding office as member of the Board of Regents at the time of the approval of this Act who is or may be a member of the faculty of the University of the Philippines or in the employ of the same, or who may be serving by appointment by the Governor-General shall continue to hold office until the expiration of his term.

Members shall serve without compensation other than actual and necessary expenses incurred either in attendance upon meetings of the Board or upon other official business authorized by resolution of the Board.

SEC. 5. The University of the Philippines shall have the general powers set out in section thirteen of Act Numbered Fourteen hundred and fifty-nine, and the administration of said University and the exercise of its corporate powers are hereby vested exclusively in the Board of Regents and the President of the University in so far as authorized by said Board.

(b) ITS POWERS

SEC. 6. The Board of Regents shall have the following powers and duties, in addition to its general powers of administration and the exercise of the powers of the corporation:

(a) To receive and appropriate to the ends specified by law such sums as may be provided by law for the support of the University;

(b) To provide for the establishment of one or more Colleges of Liberal Arts; a College of Law; a College of Social and Political Science; a College of Medicine and Surgery; a College of Pharmacy; a College of Dentistry; a College of Veterinary Science; a College of Engineering; a College of Mines; a College of Agriculture; a College of Education; a School of Fine Arts; a School of Forestry; a Conservatory of Music, and such other Colleges and schools as the Board of Regents may deem necessary: Provided, That a Board of Regents may establish these colleges, or any of them, in Manila or in any other place in the Archipelago, as soon as in its judgment conditions shall favor their opening and funds shall be available for their maintenance: And provided, further, That the Board of Regents shall have power to combine two or more of the colleges authorized by this Act, in the interest of economy and efficiency: And provided, finally, That the Philippine Medical School, as established by Act Numbered Fourteen hundred and fifteen, as amended, shall become the College of Medicine and Surgery of the Philippine University as soon as two or more colleges of the University of the Philippines shall have been established and in actual operation;

(c) To confer the usual honorary degrees upon persons other than graduates of the University in recognition of learning, statesmanship, or eminence in literature, science, or art: Provided, That such degrees shall not be conferred in consideration of the payment of money or other valuable consideration;

(d) To establish chairs in the colleges hereinbefore mentioned, and to provide for the maintenance or endowment of such chairs, as well as to provide for such other professors, assistant professors, instructors, tutors, and lecturers as the progress of instruction may make necessary and to fix the compensation pertaining to such positions;

(e) To appoint, on the recommendation of the President of the University, professors, instructors, lecturers and other employees of the University; to fix their compensations, hours of service, and such other duties and conditions as it may deem proper; to grant to them in its discretion leave of absence under such regulations as it may promulgate, any other provisions of law to the contrary notwithstanding, and to remove them for cause after an investigation and hearing shall have been had;

(f) To approve the course of study and rules of discipline drawn up by the University Council as hereinafter provided; to fix the tuition fees required of students, as well as the matriculation fees, graduation fees and fees for laboratory courses, and all special fees; and to remit the same in special cases;

(g) To provide fellowships and scholarships and to award the same to students giving special evidence of merit;

(h) To prescribe rules for its own government, and to enact for the government of the University such general ordinances and regulations, not contrary to law, as are consistent with the purposes of the University as defined in section two of this Act;

(i) To receive, in trust, bequests, gifts, and donations of real and personal property, of whatever kind, and to administer the same for the benefit of the University, or any department thereof, or for the assistance of any student or students thereof, in accordance with the request or direction of the donor and, in the absence thereof, as may be determined by the Board of Regents in its discretion.

QUORUM

SEC. 7. A quorum of the Board of Regents shall consist of a majority of all the members holding office at the time the meeting of the Board is called. All process against the Board of Regents shall be served on the president or secretary thereof.

SEC. 8. On or before the tenth day of August of each year, the Board of Regents shall file with the Governor-General a detailed report, setting forth the progress, conditions, and needs of the University.

THE UNIVERSITY COUNCIL

SEC. 9. There shall be a University Council, consisting of the President of the University and of all instructors in the University holding the rank of professor, associate professor, or assistant professor. The Council shall have power to prescribe the courses of study and rules of discipline subject to the approval of the Board of Regents. It shall fix the requirements for admission to any College of the University, as well as for graduation and the receiving of a degree. The Council alone shall have the power to recommend students or others to be recipients of degrees. Through its president or committees it shall have disciplinary power over the students within the limits prescribed by the rules of discipline approved by the Board of Regents. The powers and duties of the President of the University, in addition to those specifically provided for in this Act, shall be those usually pertaining to the office of the president of a university.

THE FACULTIES

SEC. 10. The body of instructors of each college shall constitute its faculty, and as presiding officer of its faculty there shall be a dean elected from the members of such faculty by the Board of Regents on nomination by the President of the University. In the appointment of professors or other instructors of the University, no religious test shall be applied, nor shall the religious opinions or affiliations of the instructors of the University be made a matter of examination or inquiry: Provided, however, That no instructor in the University shall inculcate sectarian tenets in any of the teachings, nor attempts, either directly or indirectly, under the penalty of dismissal by the Board of Regents, to influence students or attendants at the University for or against any particular church or religious sect.

SEC. 11. Professors and other regular instructors in the University shall be exempt as such from any civil service examination or regulation as a requisite to appointment.

THE SECRETARY

SEC. 12. There shall be a secretary of the University, appointed by the Board of Regents. He shall be the secretary of such Board and also of the University, and shall keep such records of the University as may be designed by the Board.

THE TREASURER

SEC. 13. The Treasurer of the Philippine Islands shall be ex-officio Treasurer of the University, and all accounts and expenses thereof shall be audited by the Insular Auditor, and all disbursements shall be made in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by him.

RELATIONS WITH OTHER GOVERNMENT BRANCHES

SEC. 14. Heads of Bureaus and Offices of the Insular Government are hereby authorized to loan or transfer, upon request of the President of the University, such apparatus or supplies as may be needed by the University and to detail employees for duty therein, when in the judgment of the head of the Bureau or Office such supplies or employees can be spared without serious detriment to the public service. Employees so detailed shall perform such duty as is required under such detail, and the time so employed shall count as part of their regular official service.

BOARD OF VISITORS

SEC. 15. The Governor-General, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall constitute a board of visitors of the University, whose duty it shall be to attend the commencement exercises of the University and to make visits at such other times as they may deem proper, to examine the property, course of study, discipline, the state of finances of the University, to inspect all books and accounts of the institution, and to make report to the Philippine Legislature upon the same, with such recommendations as they favor.

SEC. 16. The sum of one hundred thousand pesos is hereby appropriated, out of any funds in the Insular Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended in the discretion of the Board of Regents for the establishment of a college or colleges authorized by this Act, the establishment of which may be considered most urgent.

SEC. 17. This Act shall take effect on its passage.

Enacted, June 18, 1908.

GENERAL INFORMATION

HISTORICAL SKETCH

Pursuant to the passage of the foregoing Act by the First Philippine Legislature, the work of establishing the colleges thus provided was begun during the latter part of the year 1908.

The Philippine Medical School established by a special Act on December 1, 1905, and opened to students for the purpose of instruction on June 10, 1907, became the College of Medicine and Surgery of the University on December 8, 1910. On March 1, 1923, its name was changed to College of Medicine.

The School of Fine Arts was temporarily established in a house rented for that purpose at 931 Calle R. Hidalgo, Quiapo, in the City of Manila, and was opened to students in June, 1909. In May, 1926, this school moved to California St., Ermita. At present the school occupies the first floor of the Villamor's Hall.

A location for the College of Agriculture was obtained by the transfer to the Board of Regents of certain lands near Los Baños, in the Province of Laguna, which had already been secured by the Bureau of Education for an Agricultural School. A temporary building was erected on this property, and school work was begun there in June, 1909.

The establishment of the Experimental Station annexed to the College of Agriculture was authorized by the Legislature under Act No. 2730, enacted February 15, 1918.

The buildings for a College of Veterinary Science were erected first on land adjoining the animal quarantine station at Pandacan, Manila. The first class was received in June, 1910. In November, 1912, the Veterinary Clinic and Hospital were opened on the grounds adjoining San Lazaro Hospital. In 1919, the College was transferred to the Campus of the College of Agriculture at Los Baños, and in May, 1933, it was brought back to Pandacan, Manila, its original location where it is now partly fused with the Bureau of Animal Industry.

The College of Liberal Arts and the College of Engineering were established June 3, 1910, and their classes opened the same month. The College of Liberal Arts had previously existed as a Government school in the Bureau of Education, known by the name of the Junior College of Liberal Arts.

A course in pharmacy was instituted under the administrative control of the College of Liberal Arts, June 5, 1911. Beginning with the academic year 1914-15 this course, by action of the Board of Regents on February 12, 1914, was transferred to the College of Medicine under the direction of the School of Pharmacy.

The Board of Regents at its meeting of May 3, 1918, authorized the establishment of a junior College of Liberal Arts in the City of Cebu and its classes were opened formally to students on July 1, 1918. In July, 1922, the Junior College of Liberal Arts, by action of the Board of Regents, became the Junior College of the University.

The construction of Rizal Hall was authorized by the Legislature under Act No. 2736, enacted February 15, 1918.

The School of Education, a department of the College of Liberal Arts authorized by the Board of Regents at its meeting of December 8, 1913, became, by a resolution of said Board, the College of Education on July 1, 1918.

The College of Law was established on January 12, 1911.

On February 4, 1916, the Philippine Legislature by Act No. 2578 founded the School of Forestry at Los Baños.

*Previous to this time the Ranger's Course in Forestry was given in the College of Agriculture.

On February 8, 1915, the Board of Regents authorized the institution of a course in Dentistry to be given in the College of Medicine.

The Conservatory of Music was authorized by Act No. 2623, and classes were opened on September 4, 1916, at No. 963

Calle R. Hidaigo in a building rented for that purpose. In June, 1925, the Conservatory moved to a new building located at the corner of Isaac Peral and Nebraska, Ermita, and in November, 1933, transferred to its permanent building, Villamor Hall, corner Taft Avenue and P. Faura.

The creation of a branch of the College of Liberal Arts in the municipality of Vigan, Ilocos Sur, for the provinces of Northern Luzon, was authorized by Act No. 2956 of the Philippine Legislature, approved on February 19, 1921, but, because of limited appropriations, this branch was able to open its first class only on June 9, 1930. The Board of Regents, at the meeting held on March 21, 1930, officially designated it as the Northern Luzon Junior College.

The Philippine Legislature, in its session in November, 1926, included in the Appropriation Act of 1927 the sum of P20,000, under the Philippine Health Service budget as a contribution to the University of the Philippines for the establishment and sole operation of the School of Hygiene and Public Health. By virtue of this contribution the School was organized and established as a regular unit of the University of the Philippines. Its first inauguration exercises were held on June 6, 1927, at the Marble Hall, Ayuntamiento.

The School of Business Administration, which, since 1916, had been operating as a Department of the College of Liberal Arts, became a school in 1929 and a separate College of the University in March, 1933.

In September, 1929, the Board approved the incorporation of the Public Health Nursing with the University of the Philippines as a "School of Public Health Nursing," affiliated with the College of Medicine.

All the colleges and schools of the University are situated in Manila, except the College of Agriculture, the School of Forestry, and the U. P. Rural High School which are located at Los Baños, Laguna, the Junior College of the University at Cebu, and the Northern Luzon Junior College at Vigan.

RULES GOVERNING THE ELECTION OF THE ALUMNI REPRESENTATIVES TO THE BOARD OF REGENTS

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE ALUMNI OF THE UNIVERSITY OF THE PHILIPPINES

SEC. 1. Qualification of voters.—Every person, regardless of sex and age, holding any degree, or the High School Teachers Certificate granted by the University of the Philippines shall be entitled to vote.

SEC. 2. Manner of election.—The president of the University shall fix a period within which nominations may be received at the office of the Registrar of the University and the closing of the polls.*

Every nomination shall be signed by at least twenty-five alumni who are qualified to vote. No alumnus shall sign more than one nomination.

Election shall be by ballot, signed by the alumnus voting and sent to the office of the Registrar. The president shall appoint a faculty committee on elections, of which the registrar of the University shall be a member, and whose duty it shall be to prepare the official ballot, to see to it that the election is legally carried out, to count the votes cast, and to report the result of the election to the President of the University. Upon receipt of the committee's report, the president shall present the same to the Board of Regents.

SEC. 3. What constitutes a choice.—The candidate receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected.

In case of tie, the tied candidates or their representatives shall draw lots in the presence of the faculty committee on elections, and the successful candidate shall be declared elected.

SEC. 4. Election contests.—In case of election contest, the same shall be decided by the President of the University, after both parties have been given an opportunity to be heard.

*The Board of Regents at its meeting held on June 11, 1931, passed the following resolution:

"RESOLVED, That hereafter the election of the two Alumni Regents be held simultaneously every three years on the last Thursday of February, and if this falls on holiday, on the previous day. Provided, however, that the first election under this provision shall be held in the year 1934 and every three years thereafter, and provided further that the terms of the incumbents now in office whose terms expire prior to the holding of said election shall be considered extended to said election.

LIST OF PRIVATE SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

AND THE COURSES THEY OPERATE UNDER GOVERNMENT APPROVAL AS OF JANUARY 31, 1937.

Furnished by the Office of Private Education, formerly Division of Private Schools and Colleges, Department of Public Instruction

ARRANGED BY PROVINCES

NOTES:

1. P means Primary
I means Intermediate
H. S. means High School
2. The letter or letters which appear after the numerals indicate the kind of courses offered. Where no letter appears, only the General Course is approved. Unless otherwise indicated, all courses are day courses only.

C means Standard Secondary Commercial
G means General
IC means Secondary Industrial Chemistry
HE means Home Economics
N means Secondary Normal
Nt means Night
SCI means Special Classical
Sp. C. means Special Commercial
V means Vocational

Where special courses are given, this fact is indicated in the list. Credits earned in special courses should be very carefully scrutinized when presented for transfer purposes. Students who have taken their work in special courses are not necessarily entitled to full credit upon transfer, except for those subjects which are identical with subjects given in the course to which a student is transferring.

3. The following list indicates the grade of instruction authorized in each elementary and secondary school either by temporary permit or by recognition.

NOTE.—It is our aim to publish a complete and up-to-date list of public and private schools, colleges and universities established in the Philippine Islands, showing the different courses they operate, the number of students enrolled in each class and the total enrollment for the present academic year. This can only be accomplished through the kind co-operation of the heads of the institutions who can furnish us with such data, including the brief history of the organization, the name of its founder, the board of trustees (in case of private schools), the administrative officers, members of the faculty or teaching staff (giving their educational attainments or college degrees), the subjects they teach, and their residence addresses.

We will, therefore, appreciate the receipt of the data referred to herein-above from our school authorities, for free publication under this section of the directory for 1938-1939.

A discount of 20% on all Orders for copies of this book will be allowed to all Division Superintendents, Supervisors and Principals of primary, intermediate and high schools, and Directors or Heads of Private Schools, Colleges and Universities.
